MORVEN.

The quarterly meeting services at White Church last Sunday were well attended. The Rev. S. T. Tucker, B. A., B.D., of Odessa, preached and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The Morven people turned out in large numbers and gave Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Frink a surprise at their home last Tuesday evening. An address, expressive of appreciation of past associations and sorrow at having soon to part with them was given to Mr. and Mrs. Frink and an address and memento to Miss Frink, appreciating her work as Sunday School organist.

The W.M.S., held their February monthly meeting at the parsonage last Wednesday. The attendance was large and interest well sustained.

Services will (D.V.) be held in the Methodist Churches as usual: At Brick Church at 10.30 a.m., Lutheran at 3 p.m., and at White Church at 7 p.m. Mr. McNeilly, of Albert College, is expected to preach.

The Quarterly Official Board Meeting of Morven Circuit will (D.V.) be held in the Brick Church on Monday, Feb. 15th, at 2 p.m., when besides other important business the pastoral supply for next year will be considered.

The farmers in this community are very wisely taking time by the forelock and engaging their help for the coming season.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Cheap Bread During War

To the People of Napaneé and Vicinity

Owing to the advancing price of flour, a rise in the price of bread will soon be inevitable. Realizing that the cost of living is now very high, I have been to some trouble to devise a plan to keep bread at a normal price. I have finally decided on the following policy.

Cambridge's Bread will be retailed at all stores for 14c for the new four-pound large loaf. The quality of the bread will be strictly first-class as always, and the three pound loaf will be no longer sold. Thus by buying your bread direct from our store and the groceries, you will save two cents a loaf on every loaf you buy.

In order to secure this low price for bread, we are going to discontinue our delivery, and by cutting down this expense, we shall be able to sell our bread at the above price.

This policy will no doubt come in for criticism, but I consider it only a just effort on my part to keep down the cost of living as far as possible while the war continues. We plan to give first-class quality and quantity at low prices, and to do this, it is necessary to sacrifice our delivery service, which will again be resumed when flour prices permit.

Fresh cakes and pies will also be sold at moderate prices, but remember Cambridge's 4-pound bread at all grocers for 14c a loaf.

Trusting that my effort will meet with the approval of all my customers I remain

THE CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY.

Dear Sir:—The Canadian Red Cross Society has been formed for aid to the sick and wounded in war. This Society is strictly undenominational and recognizes neither race, color nor creed in its work of beneficence.

In the present war the Society is actively engaged in co-operation with the British Red Cross Society in bringing immediate aid to the sufferers on the field of battle. For this purpose we have already sent $75,000 in cash for the general purpose of relief, $25,000 for the purchase of twelve motor ambulances for the British Red Cross Society and $21,000 for the purchase of motor ambulances and a motor travelling kitchen for Canadian forces exclusively. In addition to this, goods to the value of nearly $150,000 have been sent over in care of the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner.

The Canadian Government has sent to England for service abroad some 30,000 men, and are about to send 20,000 more, and it is their intention to increase this in course of time to at least 100,000.

The Society has supplied to our Seven Canadian Hospitals with the Canadian Contingents various comforts and necessities in addition to those supplied by the Government. These supplies will, in the ordinary course, soon be used up and it will be necessary to keep up a constant stream both of money and goods in our endeavor to mitigate the horrors of war, and to promote the comfort of our sick and wounded Canadian soldiers to the limit of our resources.

In order to explain more fully this humane and meritorious work we are asking Mrs. Grant Needham, of Toronto, to visit your town on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13th, and to endeavor to interest your citizens in our work. Mrs. Needham's address will be largely educational, and we will feel greatly obliged if you will give her that support which the justice of our cause demands. No effort will be made to organize a branch unless desired, but rather to help the Patriotic work now being proceeded with.

For this purpose please be so kind as to call a public meeting on the above date, and to give it such publicity as may be necessary to ensure a large attendance.

Yours faithfully,

President.

In response to the above appeal a meeting of the general public will be held in the Town Hall on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13th, at 2.30. The meeting is free and all expenses are paid by Toronto Red Cross.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION

A very appreciative, though small audience listened to a very stirring though interesting address given by Dr. C. C. James and Mr. J. Lockie Wilson in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening. Dr. James was given a splendid ovation when he reached the platform and expressed his pleasure upon being able to return once more to the home of his youth. In opening his address Dr. James spoke of the Empires call to duty and the responsibility that rested upon each one of us. It is not so much a question of what Canada is doing as what is each one of us doing. Looking through any one of the Toronto papers one will see from one to four pages devoted to sport. Are the people of Canada more interested in a hockey match or races in the Southern States than the happenings in Europe. Few as realize that at this present time the greatest, fiercest and most disastrous war of the world, past or present, is being waged, but in a few weeks time we will comprehend when the reports come across the ocean and we are afraid to look at the paper lest some one we know has fallen in the battle.

What is Canada's position and duty. To those who feel that they should serve on the firing line the country bids them Godspeed upon their journey. But those who stay at home, have they an excuse, a duty to perform. That duty is production.

That does not mean necessarily to work harder, no one can accuse the Ontario farmer of not working as hard as any man, but it means that we must work to better advantage. The great armies must be fed and the man who devotes his whole energy in producing the greatest possible amount that lies within his power is serving his country just as faithfully as the man on the firing line. Those who stay at home and fail to perform their duty in this service are like the man who joins the colors and goes into the trenches and then lays down his rifle and runs away.

The farmers must farm a little more with their brains, use better seed, give better cultivation to the soil. Now is the time to put into practice those little things that we have heard in the institutes yet have not got around to yet. Now is the time.

While German militarism is being trodden under foot we can take a leaf out of their agricultural policy through which she rose to be one of the greatest agricultural nations of the world. It was due to the fact that they always did a little better, took a little more pains. And Belgium too can teach how to make the greatest use of every inch of land.

Land is so valuable in Belgium that they cannot afford to put fences on it. This not only applies to the farmers of Ontario but also to the townspeople. Back gardens that hitherto have supplied but a few vegetables during the summer months

While German militarism is being trodden under foot we can take a leaf out of their agricultural policy through which she rose to be one of the greatest agricultural nations of the world. It was due to the fact that they always did a little better, took a little more pains. And Belgium too can teach how to make the greatest use of every inch of land. Land is so valuable in Belgium that they cannot afford to put fences on it. This not only applies to the farmers of Ontario but also to the townspeople. Back gardens that hitherto have supplied but a few vegetables during the summer must now be made to produce more than ever before, remembering that the majority of back gardens in this country are of the same size as a good many Belgian farms on which a whole family lived.

Great credit, said Dr. James, is due to the women of Ontario, especially the Women's Institutes, who were the first to respond when the Red Cross went forth. If the men fail to do their duty we will call upon the women, who will respond in a manner that will put the men to shame. As a closing sentence Dr. James again asked the question, What are we going to do?

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson made a very stirring speech. His theme was Patriotism and Production, and Production more than usual. Mr. Wilson drew a very vivid picture of Germany's oppression and atrocities on Belgium, repeating the well known passage, "They who flourish by the sword shall perish by the sword." Speaking of our own country he said that we little realized the service that Belgium has done to save us and there is a debt that we can never fully repay. There are too many of the unemployed in the cities and large centres to-day that are relying upon charity when they are perfectly able to join the colors or to go out on the land and help produce. Both avenues are open to them and both are equally patriotic but there are hundreds, even thousands, who would not respond to either call. They are a blot upon our national conscience. Those who will neither fight nor work should starve, they are not deserving of the charity that is being given them in the larger centres. Production is our answer to the call and Canadian farmers will rise with all their might to do their part.

The choir of Grace Church rendered a number of patriotic songs that were very well received and thoroughly appreciated. Mayor Alexander occupied the chair for the meeting. Mr. John Fixter intended to give a lantern slide lecture but as the hour was drawing late it was omitted, but the farmers did not lose Mr. Fixter altogether, as the talk he gave the farmers in the afternoon was one of the best that has been heard in this part of the country and of which we hope to give a more detailed report at an early issue.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed desire to avoid party bickerings a to give a generous support to the policy of the Government. At the sa

BLANK VOTE ASKED.

British Government Asks Unnamed Sum For War Purposes.

LONDON, Feb. 9. — For the first time in two hundred years the British Government yesterday invited the House of Commons to give it a blank check for army purposes.

This is virtually the effect of the new precedent set up by the introduction of the army estimates without details and without the aggregates of the expenditures, and when Parliament has voted the sum of £5,000 sterling under each of the fifteen groups of expenditures it will have voted supplies without limit for an army of 3,000,000 men, to be accounted for when the war is over.

H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, paid a warm tribute to the territorial troops, whose value and efficiency, he declared, had been proved by recent events to be unquestioned. The British design of aeroplane, the Secretary contended, has been found superior to that used by any other country. The speaker said also that as a result of the excellent sanitary services cases of enteric fever were rare, and that evidence was accumulating that inoculation ought to be made compulsory.

The naval estimates, issued last evening, asks Parliament to vote for an additional force of 32,000 officers and men.

This would bring up the total personnel for the present year to 250,000 men.

NERLICH'S ARRESTED.

Toronto Merchant and Wife Faced With Wider Charges.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—As the result of speedy action before the grand jury in the criminal assizes yesterday, Emil Nerlich faces a new charge of conspiring with his wife, Hedwig Nerlich, to commit treasonable acts, in connection with the attempt to leave Canada of Arthur Zirzow, a German reservist. Nerlich himself, already indicted on a straight charge of treason and admitted to bail, was rearrested at once, and the police also took Mrs. Nerlich into custody at her home, 16 Dunbar road.

As soon as the new indictment, which charged the couple with spying, by giving information to assist the enemy and also by trading with the enemy, were returned, E. A. DuVernet, K.C., the crown prosecutor, requested that bench warrants be issued for both of those named, and the detectives acted on them at once.

Chief Justice Mulock, before whom the prisoners were arraigned, granted them bail in the sum of $150,000.

der unprecedented conditions of mate, which have involved discomfort in spite of every effort on the part of his Majesty's Government to alleviate the hardships, which have borne by the contingent with a cheerful resolve that augurs well for the endurance of the arduous conditions of actual active service.

"The contingent was inspected by his Majesty the King on Thursday last, and his Majesty was much gratified at the marked general improvement since he last inspected the and at the spirit of eagerness and loyal enthusiasm which fills all ranks. The contingent will shortly join the Canadian comrades of the Prince Patricia's Light Infantry at the front. These are acquiring themselves in a manner worthy of the great Dominion to which they belong, and some of them have already given their lives for the great cause for which the Empire is now fighting."

The address was moved by Mr. Weichel (Con., N. Waterloo), who made an excellent speech, and was seconded by Mr. Achim (Con., Belle). Speeches were also delivered by Dr. Clark (Lib., Red Deer), W. Maclean (Con., S. York), and E. MacDonald (Lib., Pictou, N.S.).

GENERAL LOAN UNLIKELY.

Joint Flotation of Allies Will Be I Advances to Other Powers.

LONDON, Feb. 9. — The Times commenting on the official bulletin relating to the conclusions of the allies' financial conference, says:

"We think that a close reading of the announcement will suggest that no general international loan is contemplated. The joint loan to be sued in the name of the allied powers, is to cover, it will be seen, advances made or to be made to other powers."

"The news that the financial measures necessary to re-establish parity of exchange between Russia and the other allies, so far as this possible, have already been adopted is particularly welcome. Russia commerce has suffered greatly owing to the closing of the Dardanelles a time when her northern ports were frozen."

"It is good news, too, that proposals from neutral countries are being made jointly by the allies. There were obvious dangers of competition."

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The estimates for the year were brought down in the Commons yesterday. The total sum to be provided for is $149,962,168, of which $105,870,093 is on consolidated fund account, and $44,092,075 on capital account. This is $17,789,320 less than was asked for last year, which shows economy on the part of the Government, for a large proportion of the various sums for public works are re-votes for works already in progress or arrangements for the progress of which has been entered into.

There is a noticeable diminution in the number of new works provided for.

The public debt, including sinking funds, takes up $23,648,506, as compared with less than $15,000,000 last year. There is a slight increase in civil government, which is placed at $7,024,253.

Public works is $22,351,830, compared with $33,390,656. Militia and defence is $5,780,100, as against $11,608,682. The war expenses are, of course, not included in this.

Subsidies to provinces are about the same — $11,451,673.

Railways and canals are $15,515,500, which is over a million less than last year.

Capital expenditure on railways and canals is $32,000,000, or $4,000,000 less. Public works capital expenditure is about $12,000,000, or $4,000,000 less.

There is a decrease of $2,000,000 in the amount required for annual drill for the militia, nearly $2,000,000 less for ordnance, arms, etc.; $292,500 less for cadet services, $860,000 less for clothing, and $580,000 less for stores.

Railway and canal votes include: I. C. R., $8,128,250, decrease $1,340,000; P. E. I. Railway, $1,938,935, increase $392,000; Hudson Bay Railway, $5,500,000; N. T. R., $500,000 for construction.

SOCIETY MAN SLAIN.

Charles Albert Massey, of Toronto, Murdered by Servant Girl.

TORONTO, Feb. 9. — Charles Albert Massey, 34 years old, 169 Walmer road, a son of the late Charles Albert Massey, whose family established the firm of Massey-Harris and erected the Massey Music Hall, was deliberately murdered as he turned from the sidewalk to enter his home about 6.15 o'clock last night. Carrie Davies, an 18-year-old domestic employed in the Massey home, fired two shots from the verandah at her employer, one of them going wild and the second striking him in the chest close to the heart. Mr. Massey died almost immediately. The girl is held on a charge of murder.

According to the story told by the police, a newsboy named Ernest Murphy, address unknown, came to the door and asked for Mr. Massey so that he could collect money due him. The Davies girl told the boy her employer was not in. When he was leaving the verandah the boy saw Massey coming from Dupont street

Germans Seek to Roll Up Russian Left in Bukowina.

Von Hindenburg Relaxes His Efforts to Smash the Slav Centre on the Bzura-Rawka Line and Is Trying to Defeat the Carpathian Advance — Forces in Argonne in Terrific Struggle.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—In that forest-dotted cockpit of the fighting on the eastern end of the allies' line in France (the Argonne) a terrific battle has been raging for two days and continues with the result still in doubt. Gains of a foot are held precious, a yard put behind an advancing column is of sufficient importance to be made the subject of a report, and the side that can lunge forward through the continual hurricane of shell and rifle fire, past the line of waiting bayonets, has won a great victory, so furious and evenly balanced is the struggle.

Bagatelle, held by the French, is the scene of the big battle. German forces opened the attack early the mornings of Sunday. Drive after drive was made against the French lines without effect. At dusk the French lines were still holding.

The French War Office issued the following bulletin yesterday:

"On the night of Feb. 6-7 the enemy exploded three series of mines at La Boiselle in front of houses in the village which we occupied. Two companies and a half were then sent against our positions, but were not able to get beyond the excavations formed by the explosions.

"During the course of the afternoon of Feb. 7 a counter-attack, executed by one of our companies, drove the enemy from the excavations, which we immediately organized. The Germans left 200 dead on the ground.

"To the north of Mesnil-les-Hurlers, on the night of Feb. 7-8, we captured a wood where the enemy had been solidly established.

"In the Argonne, the action of the infantry engaged at Bagatelle was prolonged throughout the night of Feb. 7-8. The Germans, after having made some progress, were able to occupy at daybreak of the 8th only particular parts of our more advanced line, around which the struggle continued during the day.

"From the sea to the Oise, there was an artillery duel Feb. 7 of considerable violence in the vicinity of Guinchy, to the west of La Bassee.

"To the southwest of Carency we were successful in a surprise attack on a German trench which had been blown up by one of our mines. The defenders of this position were either killed or taken prisoners.

"On the Aisne front, and in Champagne Feb. 7 saw an intermittent bombardment. The accuracy of our artillery fire was evidenced at several places. To the west of Hill 191, north of Massiges, our batteries checked an attempted attack on the part of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, a German attack in the direction of Fontaine Madame was repulsed. At Bagatelle a violent infantry engagement was started by the Germans, and has been going on since the morning of Feb. 7. According to latest reports, all our positions were being maintained.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

PICTURESQUE ICE FIELDS.

Scenic Beauties of Uncle Sam's Glacier National Park.

That the ice fields of Glacier National park present some of the best examples of active glaciers now found in the United States, is a statement made by W. C. Alden in a government pamphlet. "They have a splendid setting in magnificent alpine scenery," says Mr. Alden, "unsurpassed in grandeur anywhere. Hidden away in the recesses of the mighty mountain ranges, these rare and wonderful features form a climax to many of the interesting trips open to the tourist.

"There are in the park about ninety small glaciers, ranging in size from Blackfoot glacier, with its three square miles of ice, down to masses but a few acres in extent, yet exhibiting the characteristics of true glaciers.

"After examining these features one can easily picture to himself as he looks down the valleys the great rivers of ice which in ages past cascaded from the cliffs below the upper cirques, converged as tributaries from the many branch valleys and united in great trunk glaciers. In imagination he can

part of every effort on the part of his Majesty's Government to alleviate the hardships, which have been borne by the contingent with a cheerful resolve that augurs well for their endurance of the arduous conditions of actual active service.

"The contingent was inspected by his Majesty the King on Thursday last, and his Majesty was much gratified at the marked general improvement since he last inspected them, and at the spirit of eagerness and loyal enthusiasm which fills all ranks. The contingent will shortly join their Canadian comrades of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry at the front. These are acquitting themselves in a manner worthy of the great Dominion of which they belong, and some of them have already given their lives for the great cause for which the Empire is now fighting."

The address was moved by Mr. Eichel (Con., N. Waterloo), who made an excellent speech, and was seconded by Mr. Achim (Con., LaSalle). Speeches were also delivered by Dr. Clark (Lib., Red Deer), W. F. Maclean (Con., S. York), and E. M. MacDonald (Lib., Pictou, N.S.).

GENERAL LOAN UNLIKELY.

Joint Flotation of Allies Will Be For Advances to Other Powers.

LONDON, Feb. 9. — The Times, commenting on the official bulletin relating to the conclusions of the allies' financial conference, says:

"We think that a close reading of the announcement will suggest that a general international loan is contemplated. The joint loan to be issued in the name of the allied powers, is to cover, it will be seen, advances made or to be made to other powers."

"The news that the financial measures necessary to re-establish the parity of exchange between Russia and the other allies, so far as this is possible, have already been adopted, is particularly welcome. Russian commerce has suffered greatly owing to the closing of the Dardanelles at a time when her northern ports are frozen."

"It is good news, too, that purchases from neutral countries are to be made jointly by the allies. There are obvious dangers of competition."

Lloyds' Odds on Peace.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—It is reported by a good authority that insurance is offered by Lloyds on the basis of total loss being payable if peace is not declared by June 30, the premium to cover this at 25 per cent., being accepted. The rate quoted for insurance against the cessation of hostilities by the end of the year is 25 lines.

Soldiers Will Guard Tunnels.

Huerta Last Ruler Recognized.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Neil Primrose, parliamentary Under Secretary of the Foreign Office, replying to questions in the House of Commons, said the British Government had not recognized anybody as President of Mexico since the retirement of Gen. Victoriano Huerta.

He added, however, that the Government had brought to the attention of the U. S. several cases of damage to loss to British interests in Mexico which had occurred since the ex-president's departure from that country in July of last year.

played in the Massey home, fired two shots from the verandah at her employer, one of them going wild and the second striking him in the chest close to the heart. Mr. Massey died almost immediately. The girl is held on a charge of murder.

According to the story told by the police, a newsboy named Ernest Murphy, address unknown, came to the door and asked for Mr. Massey so that he could collect money due him. The Davies girl told the boy her employer was not in. When he was leaving the verandah the boy saw Massey coming from Dupont street and waited for him. He got his money, and when he had walked a short distance up the street he heard a shot fired. He turned around and another shot was fired and Massey dropped on the sidewalk. The girl was said to be on the verandah then.

Dr. Mitchell, 140 Walmer road, was also coming from Dupont street to his home, when the shooting took place. He was soon at Massey's side, but could do nothing for him. The police were called and on their arrival surrounded the house. Sergt. Brown entered and in the cellar he found Albert Massey, aged 14, a son. After passing through the rooms of the ground floor he started to ascend the stairs. Miss Davies called him to come up. He called back, commanding her to come down. They met at the top of the stairs. She had the revolver in her hands with which she did the shooting, but did not attempt to use it.

Miss Davies had been employed by Massey for the past two years.

According to police and neighbors, Mrs. Massey left Toronto yesterday morning for Hartford, Conn. The dead man was a prominent figure in the younger society set in Toronto.

CONTINGENT IN FRANCE?

Arrival of Part of Canadian Force Evidenced by Messages.

TORONTO, Feb. 9. — Cable messages received in Toronto yesterday indicate that part at least of the Canadian Expeditionary Force is in France. One of these was to Mr. Frederic Nicholls, whose son, Lieut. Walter Nicholls, is with the Queen's Own Rifles. Another Torontonian whose son is with the Queen's Own Rifles received a cable. Each cable was from France, and each recorded the safe arrival of the sender. The Q. O. R., the Grenadiers and the Governor-General's Body Guard constitute the 3rd Battalion of the force.

Further Casualties.

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—The following casualties in the Canadian Expeditionary Force were announced by the Militia Department:

part of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, a German attack in the direction of Fontaine Madame was repulsed. At Bagatelle a violent infantry engagement was started by the Germans, and has been going on since the morning of Feb. 7. According to latest reports, all our positions were being maintained.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

Trying Turning Movement.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 9. — Another sudden change has taken place in the situation on this front. The enemy appears to have abandoned his efforts to break through on the Bzura-Rawka line and to be concentrating his main energy on an attempt to roll up the extreme left of the Russian position in Bukowina and the eastern ridge of the Galician Carpathians. The Germans have also hurried reinforcements into Eastern Prussia and assumed the offensive in the valley of the Sheshupa, thus far without success.

It is still an open question whether these movements have immediate connection with one another. In military circles the idea seems to predominate that the Germans have convinced themselves nothing is to be gained from further sacrifice of life on the insurmountable barrier to the west of Warsaw. It is even a question whether the Germans, after their colossal losses of the past few days, any longer possess a sufficient number of fresh unshaken units to make any serious assaults on the trenches of the Russians in that quarter. Possibly they are merely drawing their breath after their stupendous and costly exertions of the last week, and in spite of all failures and fruitless sacrifices will once more launch their masses at the Russian positions.

Looked at as a whole, the situation in the Carpathians seems eminently satisfactory. It is true the Russians have had to give way in Bukowina, but the movements there must be regarded merely as local incidents in a big general battle along the whole ridge, and the tendency of this is distinctly in favor of the Russians.

The situation of the Russians in Bukowina was bound to become uncomfortable as soon as the enemy concentrated an attack on that point, in consequence of the propinquity of the Rumanian frontier, which allows no room for manoeuvring, but if they are permanently successful farther to the west they will recover the lost ground as a matter of course.

Didn't Want to Be Singular.

It was in the drawing room after dinner that they discussed an absent maiden friend's bad points with the usual grim and scathing glee. Having thoroughly dissected her personal appearance, they next paid attention to her mental shortcomings.

"She is a very singular girl," spake the one.

"Yes, indeed," responded her companion; "but, then, that is not her fault, for I never saw a girl so anxious to be plural."

The One Who Was Afraid.

"Didn't marry her, eh? I suppose you were afraid you could not support her in the style to which she had become accustomed?"

"Oh, no, I was not at all afraid of that."

"Then why didn't?"

"It was she that was afraid I could not."

In Disguise.

"Do you mean to say that you flirted with your wife all the evening at the masked ball and didn't know her?"

"That's right. But she was so deuced agreeable how was I to know her?"

trips open to the tourist.

"There are in the park about ninety small glaciers, ranging in size from Blackfoot glacier, with its three square miles of ice, down to masses but a few acres in extent, yet exhibiting the characteristics of true glaciers.

"After examining these features one can easily picture to himself as he looks down the valleys the great rivers of ice which in ages past cascaded from the cliffs below the upper cirques, converged as tributaries from the many branch valleys and united in great trunk glaciers. In imagination he can see these great glaciers, many hundreds of feet in depth, filling the great mountain valleys from side to side and deploying thence upon the bordering plains. He seems to see these mighty engines plucking away the rock ribs of the mountains, smoothing, grinding and polishing the irregularities and sweeping away the debris to be spread on the plains below. These glaciers developed and extended three times and, after each development, the congealed masses melted away on the return of milder climatic conditions, until at length only the small cliff glaciers of the present day are left lurking in the protected recesses at the heads of the capacious valleys.

"Many of the rock walled amphitheatres are no longer occupied by ice, but from all these issues streams fed by the melting snow or ice. These plunge over the cliffs in beautiful, foaming cascades and rush on down the mountain gorges. The melting glaciers left many inclosed basins, large and small, and in these the waters rest awhile and mirror in their crystal depths the dark green of the surrounding forests, the rich colors of the rugged mountain walls and the deep blue of the cloud flecked sky. On, again, from lake to lake, the waters flow and finally start down their long courses to the sea to merge at length with the chill waters of Hudson bay, the balmy tides of the Gulf of Mexico or the rolling billows of the Pacific."

Contentment.

Contentment is the pearl of great price. Few persons are satisfied with their lot. No matter if they have plenty of work and good wages, they envy some one else who is doing better. The boy with the toy cart envies the lad with the bicycle, and the latter looks with covetous eyes on every motorcar that passes by. So it goes everywhere. The poor envy the rich, and the rich envy each other, and under such conditions the preacher of a gospel of envy finds it easy to gather a congregation.

Good and Bad.

A noted wag met an Irishman in the street one day and thought he would be funny at his expense.

"Hello, Pat!" he said. "I'll give you eight (in) pence for a shilling."

"Will ye now," said Pat.

"Yes," he replied.

The Irishman handed over the shilling, and his friend put eight-pence into his palm in return.

"Eight in pence," he explained. "Not bad, is it?"

"No," answered Pat, "but the shilling is!"—London Tit-Bits.

FIREFLIES IN JAPAN.

Catching Them For Decorative Purposes is a Regular Trade.

In Japan there is followed the pretty custom of employing in garden parties and in various other social functions the native fireflies for purposes of decorative illumination. In some cases these tiny creatures are disposed about in cages; sometimes they are released in swarms in the presence of guests.

To meet the demand for fireflies thus used it follows that there must be some systematic method of effecting their capture in sufficient quantities. There are a number of concerns in the Japanese cities that employ men to catch the fireflies. These hunters proceed about their task in this way:

The start is made at sunset, and the hunter takes with him a long bamboo pole and a bag of mosquito netting. When a suitable growth of willows near water is reached the hunter makes ready his net and strikes the branches, filled with the insects, with his pole. This jars them to the ground, where they may easily be gathered if one proceed about the job quickly before they have had time to recover and fly away.

The skilled hunter, sparing no time to put them at once into his bag, uses both hands to pick them up, and he tosses them lightly into his apron, where he holds them unharmed until it can contain no more. Then he transfers them to his bag.

This work proceeds until about 2 o'clock in the morning, at which hour the insects are beginning to leave the trees for the dewy soil. Then the hunter changes his tactics. He brushes the surface of the ground with a light broom to startle the insects into flight, when they are taken as before. It is said that an expert may capture as many as 3,000 in a single night.—Washington Star.

STICKY FEET OF THE FLY.

Why the Germ Laden Pest Constantly Rubs and Bruises Them.

Before the men of science terrified the world with their talk of germs most people thought that the housefly was a harmless creature and very cleanly in his habits, since he seemed to spend a great part of his time in cleaning his legs, but since public opinion has turned against him some explanation has to be found for his apparent cleanliness. Says the Bibliothek der Unterhaltung und des Wissens:

"The fact that a fly can walk on a glazed or slippery perpendicular surface has long been a matter of observation. It was at first thought that the fine hairs that cover his legs were so small that they could enter the pores of the smoothest surface and in that way bear the weight of his body. Later it was thought that a sticky fluid was secreted by the feet, which caused them to adhere slightly to the wall. The advent of the microscope has made it possible to observe the precise facts about the fly's unusual powers.

"It is true that the fly's feet secrete a kind of grease, but not in a liquid form. Each leg has from 1,600 to 2,000 minute hairs, and each hair carries a certain amount of this fat. When the fly lights on a smooth surface the whole mass of hairs adheres to it, and each individual hair can be seen under the microscope to leave a distinct grease spot, which has a little circular mark in its center made by the

ART TREASURES OF FRANCE

Precautions That Guard Them at the Louvre, in Paris.

Those who visit the Louvre do suspect the labor that is necessary keeping the building in order. It is protected at night against fire burglars by watchmen, who, with vulvers at hip and dark lantern hand, make their rounds, accompanied by police dogs.

Upstairs and downstairs and in the corridors, says the Paris correspondent of the New York Sun, distance they travel amounts to miles, and in every room the watchmen must "punch" the clock shows whether the rooms have been inspected and how often.

During the night the most valuable works of art are kept under lock and key. When the galleries are closed the public a clever piece of mechanism is set in motion that carries the jewels, worth millions of dollars, a special burglar proof chamber. Venus de Milo, too, has her own special bedroom. An iron shutter is drawn from the ground in front of her, hides the marble features of the goddess.

In the early morning an army of custodians pours through the rooms and the process of cleaning begins. A force of 150 men sets to work with brooms, dusters and floor polish. The custodians exceed the strength of a company of soldiers on a war front. There are one chief custodian, three underchiefs, twenty-seven seniors and 148 inferior custodians. These must be added the Louvre's staff, for the great place has its own works department and almost its own factory.

RADIUM AND LIGHTNING

And the Better Protection of Homes During Thunderstorms.

Radium has been discovered valuable to improve lightning rods in their protection of buildings during thunderstorms. Of course the enormous expense of radium prevents any practical use of the fact as yet. But there is a fair possibility that the information gained in this way will lead to a form of lightning rod which will be more efficient or that further experiments will show that a tiny quantity of radium at a reasonable cost will prove the protection.

The purpose of lightning rods, of course, is to catch the electrical currents in the air during a storm and lead them safely into the ground instead of allowing the lightning to follow its own course down through a house or church steeple, and their use is based on the principle that a metal will give the electricity a smooth path of less resistance than ordinary building material.

The whole trouble with lightning rods now is that, though they can be made to do the trick if the electrical discharge is near them, there is no way to lead electricity through the air to the rod. Radium will do this part of the work, as has been demonstrated in scientific experiments. Two milligrams of radium on the end of a wire made the air a considerable distance away a vastly better conductor.

Thus any electrical discharge within several yards of the rod had a path open for it along the radium rays to the rod and then down the rod to earth.—Saturday Evening Post.

Power of Falling Water.

Still water gives no power, no energy. Falling water has only as much power as is represented by its weight. A gallon of falling water will develop as much power as a falling block of iron weighing 62.5 pounds. Of course, the greater the fall the greater the power developed. Water falling one foot will develop a pressure of .43 pounds per square inch of pipe. The same amount of water falling 100 feet will develop a pressure of 43.31 pounds per square inch of pipe. Falling 1,000 feet it would produce a pressure of 433.09 pounds per square inch of pipe. To compute the power of falling water it is necessary to multiply the volume of flowing water in cubic feet per minute by its weight, 62.5 pounds, and this product by the vertical height of the fall in feet, and divide by 33,000, the number of foot pounds representing one horsepower for one minute.—New York World.

Military Files.

"Files on parade" means a body of soldiers, a troop or company marching in a file or line, not abreast, but one after another. We speak of the "rank and file," meaning soldiers who are formed so that they march abreast and also in ranks following each other. The term in general means the common soldiers below the rank of non-commissioned officers. There are other file terms in military tactics, such as "file right" and "file left." As Kipling uses the term it means the common soldiers who have been called out for the purpose described in the poem of "Danny Deever."—Philadelphia Press.

caused them to adhere slightly to the wall. The advent of the microscope has made it possible to observe the precise facts about the fly's unusual powers.

"It is true that the fly's feet secrete a kind of grease, but not in a liquid form. Each leg has from 1,600 to 2,000 minute hairs, and each hair carries a certain amount of this fat. When the fly lights on a smooth surface the whole mass of hairs adheres to it, and each individual hair can be seen under the microscope to leave a distinct grease spot, which has a little circular mark in its center made by the hair itself.

"With such sticky feet it is naturally the case that the fly collects a good deal of dust in the course of his daily perambulations. If he wishes to walk on glass or upside down on the ceiling he must spend a few hours every day keeping his feet clean of this coating of dirt."

WEIGHT OF AIR.

One Cubic Foot of Atmosphere Weighs More Than an Ounce.

The common belief that air weighs nothing or almost nothing, a belief which has given rise to the simile "light as air," needs correction.

A toy balloon filled with a cubic foot of air weighs 564 grains more than the same balloon collapsed. This shows that the weight of a cubic foot of air is 564 grains, which is a good deal more than an ounce. Accordingly a small room (15 by 15 by 10) containing 2,250 cubic feet of air would weigh 2,900 ounces, or 183.7 pounds avoirdupois, as much as a large man. Could you lift a room full of air?

The air in an automobile tire under pressure of 150 pounds a square inch weighs proportionally ten times as much, while air under the pressure of fifty atmospheres weighs fifty times as much as an equal volume of ordinary air. When air is liquefied its volume is reduced to one sixteen-hundredth normal, so that the liquid is 1,600 times as heavy as gaseous air, or about as heavy as water.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Cats and Wildcats.

Wild cats are now rarities in Europe, though formerly they were comparatively common in most parts of the continent. The few survivors occur mostly in Hungary and occasionally in Spain and Greece. In Spain, by the way, the animals build nests in trees or among tall bamboos for the rearing of their young, though generally they prefer a crevice in a rocky country in which to make a lair. Our domesticated cat is not derived from the untamable European animal, but was introduced ready tamed from Egypt.—London Mail.

As to "Sights."

A teacher of English criticised an essay written by a girl pupil in which the girl used the word "eyesight."

"What other kind of sight could there be except 'eyesight'?" asked the teacher.

Rising to the challenge, the pupil replied, "Well, there are foresight and hindsight."—Indianapolis News.

Foolish Suggestion.

"You ought to typewrite your poetry," said the harsh editor.

"Great Scott!" replied Mr. Penwiggles. "If I were expert enough to do that kind of typewriting do you think I'd be putting in my time on poetry?"—Chicago News.

rods now is that, though they can make to do the trick if the electrical discharge is near them, there is no way to lead electricity through the air the rod. ### Out of the Mouths of Babies.

Sunday School Teacher—Can you tell me who dwelt in the Garden of Eden? Little May—Yes, ma'am; the Adames.

"What is an amateur, Bobby?" queried his small sister.

"An amateur," replied Bobby, "anything that isn't nature."

"Mamma," queried little Myra, "you think grandpa has really gone heaven?"

"Yes, dear," was the reply. "Well, continued Myra, 'I'll bet sneaks outside once in awhile to smoo his pipe.'"

In the lesson mention had been made of the canthook that is used in rolling logs.

"Can you tell me what a canthook is, Tommy?" asked the teacher.

"Sure," replied Tommy. "It's a coat that hasn't any horns."—Detroit Free Press.

What Bobwhite Eats.

Fifteen per cent of the food of the bobwhite is composed of insects, including several of the most serious pests of agriculture. Half of its food consists of weed seeds, one-fourth grain and about one-sixteenth of wild fruits. Taken in all the bobwhite is very useful to the farmer, and while it may not be necessary to remove it from the list of game birds, every farmer should see that his own farm is not depleted by sportsmen.

Compensation.

King Alfonso is very English in some of his expressions. For instance he was discussing with a well known British peer the difficulties and dangers of kingship.

"So you think, sir," remarked the peer, "that it is rather a thankless task being a king?"

"It is rather difficult work at times," replied his majesty with a grin, "but it is deuced well paid!"—London Globe.

Helping Him.

A section foreman on a southern railway heard the following conversation between two of his dusky laborers:

"Jim, you bettah come here an' help me. I's talkin' up fer you."

"How's dat?"

"W'y, dis here man say you ain't fer de dawgs, an' Ah tole him yes you is!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Superfluous Adornment.

"I am now engaged on a beautiful design for a new coin," said the artist. "I don't see why we need it," replied Miss Cayenne. "You can't make money so good looking as to render it more popular than it already is."—Washington Star.

RT TREASURES OF FRANCE.

recations That Guard Them at the Louvre, in Paris.

Those who visit the Louvre do not expect the labor that is necessary in keeping the building in order. It must e protected at night against fire and urglars by watchmen, who, with revolvers at hip and dark lanterns in and, make their rounds, accompanied y police dogs.

Upstairs and downstairs and along ie corridors, says the Paris correspondent of the New York Sun, the istance they travel amounts to four iles, and in every room the watchmen must "punch" the clock that ows whether the rooms have been inspected and how often.

During the night the most valuable orks of art are kept under lock and ey. When the galleries are closed to ie public a clever piece of mechanism set in motion that carries the royal wels, worth millions of dollars, into special burglar proof chamber. The enus de Milo, too, has her own spe-al bedroom. An iron shutter rises om the ground in front of her and ides the marble features of the godess.

In the early morning an army of istodians, pours through the rooms, ad the process of cleaning begins. A rce of 150 men sets to work with rooms, dusters and floor polishers.
be custodians exceed the strength of company of soldiers on a war foot-
g. There are one chief custodian, ree underchiefs, twenty-seven supeor and 148 inferior custodians. To ese must be added the Louvre's artins, for the great place has its own orks department and almost its own ctory.

RADIUM AND LIGHTNING.

nd the Better Protection of Horses
During Thunderstorms.

Radium has been discovered vastly improve lightning rods in their protection of buildings during thunderstorms. Of course the enormous cost radium prevents any practical use the fact as yet. But there is a very ir possibility that the information luded in this way will lead to a new rm of lightning rod which will be ore efficient or that further experi-ents will show that a tiny quantity radium at a reasonable cost will improve the protection.

The purpose of lightning rods, of urse, is to catch the electrical curants in the air during a storm and id them safely into the ground instead of allowing the lightning to pick own course down through a house church steeple, and their use is sed on the principle that a metal rod ll give the electricity a smoother th of less resistance than ordinary liding material.

The whole trouble with lightning is now is that, though they can be ide to do the trick if the electrical charge is near them, there is no way lead electricity through the air to rod. Radium will do this part of e work, as has been demonstrated in entific experiments. Two milli-ms of radium on the end of a rod de the air a considerable distance ay a vastly better conductor.
hus any electrical discharge within eral yards of the rod had a path n for it along the radium rays to rod and then down the rod to the
th.—Saturday Evening Post

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Notwithstanding a liberal decrease in the U. S. visible supply, total wheat today swung to the bear side, losing all of an early advance and more. Export sales were disappointing to the bulls, and there was a slight enlargement of country offers. The market closed unsettled at 1 1/4c to 1 1/2c net decline.
Other losses for the day were: Corn, 1/4c to 1/2c; oats, 1/4c to 1/2c; and provisions 2 1/2c to 15c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 8.—The wheat market was quiet generally, and prices kept very steady. Trading in futures was light. May wheat was traded in at from $1.58 1/2 to $1.59 1/2; July, from $1.59 1/2 to $1.60 1/2. Oats opened 1/4c higher, and made a fractional gain, but weakened later. Trading was from 68 1/2c to 69 1/2c, but transactions were few. There was a fair demand for cash wheat of the higher grades, and quite a number of offerings were on the market.
May wheat ranged from $1.57 to $1.59 1/2,
July from $1.59 1/2 to $1.60 1/2.
Wheat futures closed 1 1/4c lower for both months, cash closed 3/4c to 1 1/2c lower, oats 1/4c to 1/2c lower, and flax 1/4c to 1c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—Business in grain over the cable today was dull, the demand being very limited and the few firm bids that were in the market were out of line and is 9d per quarter below what exporters asked. The local market for coarse grains is firm with a steady trade passing in car lots, but the demand for round lots was limited. Buckwheat is very strong and prices have scored a sharp advance with sales of car lots at 97c per bushel ex-store. Flour is firm with a fair local business doing, but the export demand is slow. Milfeed is in good demand at firm prices.
Butter is strong. Cheese unchanged.
Eggs steady.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Toronto, Ont.,
Jan. 31. — Pastor
Russell is here.
We report one of
his addresses,
from the text,
"They shall be
Mine, said the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I make up My Jewels." — Malachi
3:17.

The figures of speech throughout the Scriptures
are full of significance, said the Pastor. When the Lord likens His faithful people to precious stones, it signifies that there is an intrinsic value or beauty that He appreciates, and it implies that such characters are rare, in comparson to the world. Our text points to the close of the Gospel Age, and not only tells that the Lord will not gather His jewels sooner, but that they are the only ones to be gathered then
—He comes to make up His jewels.
We have here a contradiction of the ordinary thought on this subject: (1)
That He has been gathering His Jewels for the past six thousand years;
and (2) That everybody who is respectable is to be gathered to the Lord and share in His Kingdom.
Evidently this thought is erroneous.

Jewels require to be searched after,
and generally need to be washed from the mire before being prepared to refract the light. So some of the Lord's jewels are found in the ordinary walks of life, and some came from deep down in the mire of sin. By one class of His servants He lifts them out of the horrible pit and the miry clay, washes them, cleanses them from sin through the merit of His own precious blood and through His Word. Then, through other servants and providences He polishes them with Divine skill, in order that they may reflect and refract the light of the glory of the Divine character.

The Work of the Great Lapidarist.

The Pastor went on to explain that as the diamond in its rough state—uncut, unpolished—has no more value than a common stone, so those whom the Lord is selecting and preparing as His jewels are to derive their ultimate value from the cutting, shaping, polishing, of their characters under Divine providence. The hardness of the diamond would represent character; and we are to remember that character belongs to the individual, and that only in proportion as each has this quality can he hope to be accepted finally as a jewel; for those without character will not endure the tests.

The crystallization of the diamond corresponds to willingness toward righteousness in the individual; and unless there be such willingness there is none of the jewel quality which the Lord is now seeking. Those, therefore, who are in the hands of the great Lapidarist and undergoing His polishing process, must first have

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache,
and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women
—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
has restored health
to thousands of such suffering women.
Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

Sleeplessness.

A favorite dictum of the physiologists, emphasized in their latest works, relates to the dangers of sleeplessness.
"Sleep is more important to life than nutrition, and insomnia kills sooner than starvation," to quote the exact words of one. This has been a kind of tradition in medicine and is reiterated again and again in these books without any real evidence, so far as I know, to support it. Taught to every medical man of older generations and to every medical fledgling of today, it finds its way to general public acceptance, begetting in the lay mind terrors of insanity and death which haunt every unfortunate victim of insomnia. The fear of not sleeping is one of the commonest causes of insomnia. Yet I do not know of any medical evidence anywhere of disastrous results from insomnia and have myself never seen any harm arise from sleeplessness apart from the harm done by the fears and worries associated with the condition.—Atlantic Monthly.

Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $7.75, but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle rang- ing from $6.25 to $7.25 per cwt., with picked lots of all grades selling at an advance of 25c per cwt. over the above prices. Sales of bulls were made at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

The feature of the small meat trade is the increasing scarcity of sheep and lambs, and in consequence a stronger feeling developed in the market and prices, as compared with a week ago, show an advance of 25c per 100 pounds. Demand for lambs is good. Sales of Ontario stock were made at $8.25 to $8.50, and Quebec at $7.75 to $8. Ewe sheep brought $5 to $5.25 per cwt. There was a good demand for calves, and sales of good stock were made freely at $10 to $12 each. Hogs were strong and prices, as compared with a week ago, show an advance of 10c per cwt. character, and we are to remember that character belongs to the individ- ual, and that only in proportion as each has this quality can he hope to be accepted finally as a jewel; for those without character will not en- dure the tests.

The crystallization of the diamond corresponds to willingness toward righteousness in the individual; and unless there be such willingness there is none of the jewel quality which the Lord is now seeking. Those, therefore, who are in the hands of the great Lapidarist and undergoing His polishing process, must first have passed through the previous experi- ence of having been found of Divine Grace—found of our Lord Jesus— must have been washed, and must have been accepted as having wills desirous of harmony with the Divine mind. These may therefore take pleasure in all the trying experiences and difficulties through which our Lord causes them to pass as parts of the polishing process, necessary to their completion as Jehovah's jewels, to be made up by the close of the Gospel Age. Then they will be set in the gold of the Divine nature, to re- flect the beauties of the Divine char- acter forever.

The speaker next proceeded to show that this work of cutting and polishing is entrusted only to the skilled hands of our Lord Jesus Christ because He Himself has passed through similar experiences at the Father's hands, and therefore knows thus what is needed to perfect the jewels, that they may be pleasing and acceptable to the Father. A part of their lesson is to have faith in the great Master-Workman whom the Father has appointed to shape and polish them.

Some may require much more trim- ming on some sides of their character than do others; and often the disposi- tion is to draw back, to be not fully submissive, to fear that the Lord has abandoned them to trial. But In- finite Wisdom assures us that this is not so, and that to draw back would leave one unfit for the Kingdom.

With the Lord's jewels, the world has seen the wheel of discipline which has been cutting this class for centuries, but it has not understood the matter. It may have even caught a glimpse of the jewels, although not so as to be able to know the real mer- it of their characters or the value of the cutting and polishing process. But the great Lapidarist knows and has explained it to the jewels; and thus being assured that all things are working together for their good, they can rejoice even in tribulation.

They know that it is working out in them "the peaceable fruits of righteousness"—meekness, gentle- ness, patience, brotherly kindness, love,—and that without these fruits they could not be amongst the chosen jewels for the King's Royal diadem.

Making a New Nose.

In a German medical journal Pro- fessor Max Joseph of Berlin describes a method of making a new nose where the original member has been destroy- ed by disease or accident. An arm is fixed above the head and encased in plaster of paris so that it cannot be moved. A piece of the skin oval in outline is then cut partially free from the arm and sewn to one side of the nose. After it has taken root in this new position the flap is cut free from the arm, which is now removed from the plaster of paris encasement, and sewn to the other side of the nose by its remaining edge. This gives suffi- cient skin covering. The nose is now built up by strips of bone taken from the shin and a straight profile is ob- tained.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

In no branch of charitable work is common sense more necessary than in work for the care and protection of children. Many a young life has been rendered hopelessly unhappy by the unwise breaking up of a family. An allwise Providence has deemed that not only should parents be the natural guardians of their children, but that the children themselves, should be powerful agents in the saving and upbuilding of their parents. Unfortunately it is equally true, that many children have followed the parental footsteps into the brothel, the poorhouse and the prison. Just as the knife of the surgeon has to cut deep in order to save, just so it is necessary to cut into the home in order to save some unfortunate children from a life of degradation and shame.

For this special and all important work the Children's Aid Society was organized some years ago and much good and effective work has been accomplished. Many a child has been given a good start along life's way, through the work and influence of this Society, but as in the case of many social and charitable organizations, the Society was hampered in its work by lack of generous financial support, but thanks to the

MORVEN.

On the evening of the 10th inst., a large number of the friends, numbering over 70, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Frink and daughter. After all received a very cordial welcome, they all settled down to a general social time, sandwiched in with music and games.

Lunch was served about 11 o'clock. After all did justice to the repast, Mr. and Mrs. Frink and daughter, Ola, were called and given the seats of honor and the following address was read :

To Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Frink, Morven, Ont.

In taking possession of your home to-night, uninvited, we, your fellow-members and adherents of the Morven Methodist congregations, wish to assure you that we contemplate no violence whatever. So rest in peace while we address you briefly. Our words shall be few and kind.

We have heard, with some concern, of your intention to remove from among us at an early date, and we take this means of assuring you of our good will in parting as well as our appreciation of your exemplary life among us in the past. A kind, helpful and neighborly neighbors, and true, trusted and faithful friends, backing up your works of kindness with smiles and words of good cheer, you have won for yourselves a warm place in our hearts. And in your position as members of the church you have by your regularity of attendance at the means of grace, and in your always being on time, together with your warmth of spirit in fellowship, and readiness to co-operate in christian work, and in liberality of financial support of local, missionary and other church interests you have been an example and help to be remembered with pleasure and profit by us all.

We are sorry to part with you and your daughter, whom we love so well because of her amiable parts and her Christian usefulness. But, as we must submit, we do so with the greater readiness, because we have this confidence, that the grace of God which has enabled you to adorn the Christian life in the past among us, is sufficient to enable you to go on to still higher attainments in every good word and work in the future. In parting we assure you that this shall be our prayer.

Signed on this ninth day of February, 1915.

Morven, February 9th, 1915.

Miss Ola Frink :

On hearing of your removal from our midst, your many friends, both old and young, could not let you go without letting you know in some small way how we have appreciated your service in the Circle, in Sunday School class and as organist in S. S. and W. M. S., in fact in all the work of the church. We shall ever prize your fidelity to duty, your self-denying efforts, and your labor of love in the various means of grace. Be assured that though you soon may leave us for your future home, you still live in our hearts affections and our fervent prayers. As a small token of esteem we beg of you to except of this chair and also this jardiner. We do not wish you to look upon them in their real value, but just as a reminder that we do appreciate your past efforts for we believe that all came from a heart full of love for the cause. And pray that every comfort and happiness that is possible may be yours, and God's blessing may crown your every righteous effort with success.

"THE ANTI CHRIST"

"Every spirit which confesseth Jesus is not God; and this is spirit of the Anti-Christ, whereof have heard that it cometh; and it is in the world already."

The word "antichrist" is a word used by St. John alone in the New Testament. The prefix "anti" signifies "contrary to," and the word therefore means, "adversary Christ."

There was a tradition in the early Church, based partly upon some beliefs of the Jews, partly upon some warnings of our Lord, and partly upon some predictions of St. Paul, that before the Day of Judgment there would arise some great enemy of Christ, "the man of sin," a sin individual of great wickedness. I in the 2nd Chapter of this Epistle St. John seems to try to correct this impression. "Ye have heard that antichrist shall come," but "even now, are there many antichrists. Those heretics who denied that Jesus Christ was what the Church believed Him to be, the Son of God were merely fore-runners of the antichrist but were themselves antichrists, representatives of the antichrist principle.

There have been many attempts explain the mysterious references in the Bible to antichrist, the man of sin, the son of perdition, the adversary, and such phrases. At various periods different persons or powers have been thought to be referred to. Nero, the persecutor, were so considered by the Christians of the 1st century; Arius, the heretic, in the 4th century; the Pope, by some of the Protestants at the time of the Reformation. But according to St. John, it is a mistake to apply the word to any one man. Rather let us think of a number of representatives of the spirit of antichrist appearing in different ages of the Church's growth;—still rather movements and tendencies hostile to Christianity, than to any one personality. It is a spiritual power, opposed to Christ, manifesting itself in different times, in different ways, in different agencies.

And it seems easy to see the token of its presence to-day. As Christians at various times have been tempted to point to some individual, so we are tempted to think of a particular living man, when we read (in the V.) St. Paul's words, "The man of sin, the Son of perdition, he that opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God or that worshipped—setting himself forth God." "The lawless one, whose coming is according to the work of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceits of unrighteousness for them that are perishing."

I do not think it would be right for us to call the Kaiser antichrist. But I do believe that the cause which he represents is the cause of antichrist. I don't think it is British prejudice which leads me to this belief. It is not because he is at war with us that I see him a representative of antichrist, but because of the spirit which has led him into war. He is not the only one to blame. At any rate our present purpose is not to sit in judgment upon him, but to

Boring Thin Glass.

Everybody who has tried understands how difficult it is to bore a hole in a strip of thin glass. The following method is said to be very successful: Press a cake of wet clay upon the glass and then make a hole through the clay of the desired size, laying bare the glass at the bottom of the hole. Then pour melted lead into the hole, and it will drop through the glass, making a round aperture. The explanation is that the sudden application of heat cracks the glass in a circle corresponding in size with the hole in the clay.—New York Tribune.

Military Reservists.

A foreign nation in time of war cannot compel its subjects, living at the time in another country, to return for military duty. It can call upon them to return, but in the event of their refusing to do so it would be helpless in the case. A foreign nation, for instance, could not forcibly seize its subjects living in this country and take them out, nor could this country force such subjects to depart.—New York American.

Killing Off the Race.

From the Christian era till the present time as statisticians and historians tell us, there have been less than 240 warless years. Up to the middle of the nineteenth century it was roughly computed that nearly 7,000,000,000 men had died in battle since the beginning of recorded history, a number equal to almost five times the present estimated population of the globe.—Christian Herald.

Satan with all power and signs, lying wonders, and with all the power of unrighteousness for them that perishing."

I do not think it would be for us to call the Kaiser antichrist. But I do believe that the cause which he represents is the cause antichrist. I don't think it is Bish prejudice which leads me to believe. It is not because he is at with us that I see him a representative of antichrist, but because of spirit which has led him into it. He is not the only one to blame. any rate our present purpose is to sit in judgment upon him, but inquire what is behind this calamity that he and his advisers have been the means of bringing on the world.

Let us look again at what John says about antichrist. "Evil spirit which confesseth not Jesus not of God, and this is that spirit of antichrist." "Who is a liar he that denieth that Jesus is Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son." Then, is what is the essence of a christ, the denial of the claims Christ. Let us keep that in mind while for a few minutes we sit German Christianity.

Since the war began I have heard people say, "And Germany, great Protestant country," as if it made it so much more astonishing that Germany and England should at war. And it is astonishing, two nations with apparently similar ideals, like-minded in some of the highest concerns of life, should be each other's throats, requires explanation.

It is true that Germany is a great Protestant country. The great majority of the people are Protestants. The strongest religious body is Lutheran Church, which in many ways resembles our own. The Lutherans have no bishops, but they have a Prayer-book and a form of service very like ours. They have Confirmation, each pastor confirming his Candidates. Their doctrines are similar to ours, so far as the formal official statements of doctrine concerned.

But when you look at the present state of German Protestantism more closely, you find that it has fallen into a danger to which Protestantism is always exposed. The danger is that of becoming too negative. It is merely a negative thing, although it is a good thing as far as it goes. But if you want the whole truth, you must seek and hold to what is good and true as well as protest against what is false. That is the peculiar merit of the Church of England among all the sections of our divided Christendom. She unites the best of the truly Catholic features of the Christian faith. She endeavours to combine authority with liberty, the old faith and the new learning, the traditions of the Church and the open Bible, the solidarity of the Church and the spiritual experience of the individual. I do not think that she perfectly achieves her combination, but at any rate that is her aim.

Now German Protestantism made no such attempt, and her leading scholars and theologians have years been on what Spurgeon used to call the "down-grade" of Unitarianism. For a very long time many of the foremost German theologians and professors have been whittling away the Christian faith little by little; dissecting the Bible until little authentic matter is left; questioning the doctrines of the Church until only an indefinite, vague pietism remains. They have been questioning the Christian faith about Christ, and explaining it away in a rationalistic sense. All supernatural part of our religion

"THE ANTI CHRIST"

A Sermon preached by Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, M. A., Vicar of the Parish of St. Mary Magdalene, on January 31st, 1915.

I JOHN IV, 3 (R. V.)

Every spirit which confesseth not Jesus is not God; and this is the spirit of the Anti-Christ, whereof ye have heard that it cometh; and now is in the world already." The word "antichrist" is a word used by St. John alone in the New Testament. The prefix "anti" signifies "contrary to," and the word "Christ" means, "adversary of Christ."

There was a tradition in the early church, based partly upon some beliefs of the Jews, partly upon some sayings of our Lord, and partly upon some predictions of St. Paul, that before the Day of Judgement there would arise some great enemy of Christ, "the man of sin," a single individual of great wickedness. But the 2nd Chapter of this Epistle. St. John seems to try to correct this impression. "Ye have heard that antichrist shall come," but "even now are there many antichrists." These heretics who denied that Jesus Christ was what the Church believed him to be, the Son of God were not really fore-runners of the antichrist, but were themselves antichrists, representatives of the antichristian principle.

There have been many attempts to claim the mysterious references of the Bible to antichrist, the man of sin, the son of perdition, the adversary, and such phrases. At various times different persons or powers have been thought to be referred to. So, the persecutor, were so considered by the Christians of the 1st century; Arius, the heretic, in the 4th century; the Pope, by some of the Protestants at the time of the Reformation. But according to St. John, it is a mistake to apply the word to any one man. Rather are we to think of a number of representatives of the spirit of antichrist appearing in different ages of the church's growth—still rather to the fore, and tendencies hostile to Christianity, than to any one person. It is a spiritual power, opposed to Christ, manifesting itself at different times, in different ways, by different agencies.

and it seems easy to see the tokens of its presence to-day. As Christians at various times have been tempted to point to some individual, so we are tempted to think of a particular man, when we read in the R. V. St. Paul's words, "The man of sin, the Son of perdition, he that opposeth and exalteth himself against that is called God or that is worshipped—setting himself forth as God." "The lawless one, whose coming is according to the work of an unrighteousness for them that are unrighteousness for them that are unrighteousness."

do not think it would be right for us to call the Kaiser antichrist. I do believe that the cause which he represents is the cause of antichrist. I don't think it is British prejudice which leads me to that. It is not because he is at war with us that I see him a representative of antichrist, but because of the evil which he has led him into war. It is not the only one to blame. At an offense to them. They think that the miracles were stories invented by the disciples, based on real occurrences seen large through the haze of memory, or otherwise to be accounted for. There are different explanations given of them, but all agree in denying the supernatural feature. Even the Virgin Birth and the Resurrection are treated in this way. In brief, instead of confessing Jesus as the Son of God Who took to Himself flesh, they make him to be a man like ourselves, who by his pure character and spiritual teaching rose in a high degree towards the Divine standard of life.

They think of Christianity not as the entrance of God into human life to redeem mankind, but as a feature of the evolution of mankind by its own efforts. It is not Almighty God, but Almighty Man that they believe in. Jesus was a noble man, a splendid teacher, a great example, but it does not follow from that, they say that we owe to him worship or love, or that we need His help, His grace. The Christ of German theology is a great teacher rather than a Divine Saviour. Its sacraments are pretty and impressive forms rather than real channels of Divine grace.

Are we justified in seeing in such teaching the spirit of antichrist? In view of St. John's clear statements I think that that is exactly what it is. But many will say, "What does it matter what a man believes? If a man is sincere, if his heart is good, what difference does it make whether he holds the whole Christian faith or not? These discussions are all very well for scholars and theologians, but what we are concerned with is not creed and doctrine, but conduct."

Very well. I accept the fact that our chief concern is with conduct, how we ought to live, what kind of men we ought to be. But was there ever a clearer example of the fact that creed influences conduct and character, that theology is the source of morality?

See the result of these ideas about the Christian faith which have long prevailed in Germany. By their fruits ye shall know them. They started by getting away from the Christian faith that the grace of God comes to mankind through His incarnate Son, Jesus Christ, and from the humble belief in man's need of that grace. They went on to the belief that man's own efforts were sufficient to attain all that was needed. Then to the belief that the strongest had the best right to prevail, to be masters of the world. work, neglecting prayer, making light of religion, these are the outward and visible signs of the presence of the spirit of antichrist. When you see them attempting to do without the grace of God, forsaking the sacraments of the Church, relying upon success to bring them happiness instead upon the growth of the kingdom of God within their hearts, there is, the spirit of antichrist. When you see them forsaking righteousness and truth and mercy and kindness and humility and love, and worshipping self, and sacrificing for the sake of self all that makes their life worthy of a child of God, there is the spirit of antichrist.

That spirit is always trying to master us, and to drag us away as a captive spoil from the army of our great Captain, Jesus Christ. The destruction and misery which antichrist has brought upon the world is a symbol of the ruin which he brings to each soul that allows itself to be led away from its allegiance to Christ. And the only way to overcome is to fill ourselves with the spirit of Christ, so that antichrist will find no room in our hearts. Believe in Jesus as the Son of God do His will, and to be like Him, and as He would have you be. Let the fruits of His spirit grow in you richly. Let nothing cool the warmth of your devotion to Him. In due time and in His own good way, Christ will conquer antichrist in the world. The peace and the love that will then be restored, is a symbol of the peace and the love and the joy that will prevail in the heart from which antichrist has been expelled and in which Christ dwells.

do not think it would be right us to call the Kaiser antichrist. I do believe that the cause which he represents is the cause of antichrist. I don't think it is British prejudice which leads me to that. It is not because he is at war with us that I see him a representative of antichrist, but because of the spirit which has led him into war, is not the only one to blame. At present our present purpose is not to sit in judgment upon him, but to inquire what is behind this fearful animosity that he and his advisers have been the means of bringing upon the world.

Let us look again at what St. Paul says about antichrist. "Every spirit which confesseth not Jesus is of God, and this is that spirit of antichrist." "Who is a liar but that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son." This, then, is what is the essence of antichrist, the denial of the claims of Christ. Let us keep that in mind while for a few minutes we study human Christianity.

Since the war began I have often heard people say, "And Germany is a Protestant country," as if that made it so much more astonishing that Germany and England should be at war. And it is astonishing, that two nations with apparently similar ideals, like-minded in some of the deepest concerns of life, should be at each other's throats, requires examination.

It is true that Germany is a great Protestant country. The great majority of the people are Protestants. The strongest religious body is the Lutheran Church, which in many ways resembles our own. The Lutherans have no bishops, but they have Prayer-books and a form of service very like ours. They have Confirmation, each pastor confirming his own candidates. Their doctrines are similar to ours, so far as the formal, official statements of doctrine are concerned.

But when you look at the present state of German Protestantism more closely, you find that it has fallen into a danger to which Protestantism is always exposed. The danger is that of becoming too negative. That is merely a negative thing, although it is a good thing as far as it goes. If you want the whole truth you must seek and hold to what is good and true as well as protest against what is false. That is the peculiar spirit of the Church of England among all the sections of our divided Christendom. She unites the Protestant with the truly Catholic features of the Christian faith. She endeavours to combine authority and liberty, the old faith and the new learning, the traditions of the Church with the open Bible, the solidarity of the Church and the spiritual experience of the individual. I do not say that she perfectly achieves her ideal, but at any rate that is her aim.

Now German Protestantism has made no such attempt, and her leaders and theologians have for years been on what Spurgeon used to call the "down-grade" of Protestantism. For a very long time now the foremost German theologians and professors have been fighting away the Christian faith bit by bit; dissecting the Bible until little authentic matter is left in questioning the doctrines of the church until only an indefinite, hazy, vague pietism remains. They have been questioning the Christian faith at Christ, and explaining it away as a rationalistic sense. All the eternal part of our religion is which would give them that supremacy. Then to the breaking of solemn treaties, as mere "scraps of paper," if they stood in the way of their brute force. Then to the crimes and cruelties, not all by drunken soldiers in the heat of victory, but many of them in cold blood, as part of a deliberate plan of campaign. Then to the bombardment of unfortified towns and cities, and the murder of women and babies.

Are we not justified in saying that the morality made in Germany is a result of the theology made in Germany. They started by denying that Jesus is the Son of God, and thinking of Him as a man like ourselves. They went on to lose their belief in Him as an infallible teacher. They proceeded to dare to question His teachings. Some of their philosophers challenge the whole system of Christian morality; they denounce mercy and pity as virtues invented as protective decoits by the slaves and parasites of mankind; they denounce Christ as the Champion of the slave and the enemy of the Master Man. On the title page of "Germany and the Next War," there is a quotation from one of them, "Valor and War have done greater things than love of our neighbor."

Those are of the words of Nietzsche, whose philosophy is said to have taken a deeper hold on the German mind than any other has for generations. His system of morals is, "Do, be, get everything you have the strength to do. Pity is a vice. Evolution means the survival of the fittest and the destruction of the unfit. Christianity, with its sympathy for the poor in spirit, means decadence, was a disease. The world belongs to those who have the might to get it, and treaties, peace pacts, and arbitration are mere points of strategy to mislead other nations, and when the grim reality of war comes they all vanish and are forgotten. Sympathy with the weak, the suffering, and the power of pathos are themselves weaknesses, and might is the ultimate proof of right. The world belongs to those who can get it, and those who have broken through to this supermorality have the world that believes in the old-fashioned virtues at their mercy."

That is the kind of morality that is actually taught and argued for in Germany. Surely if we could not see that the loss of the Christian faith in Christ as the Son of God is of the spirit of antichrist, though St. John says it is, it must be clear to us that the morality which is the result of that loss, is of that spirit. It is directly contrary to the spirit of Christ.

And so we seem to see in this war a conflict between the spirit of Christ and the spirit of antichrist. But I do not mean by that that every German and Austrian is indwelt by the spirit of antichrist, and that every Russian, Frenchman, Belgian and Briton is moved by the spirit of Christ. There are many good, true, faithful Christians among our foes. There are many lapsed, evil, practically, heathen, among ourselves and our allies.

The Germans have no monopoly of the spirit of antichrist, though I believe that they are fighting, though they know it not, in his cause. For the conflict between Christ and antichrist is a bigger thing than the war, big as that is. It is a conflict which is always going on in the world. It is a conflict which is waged in the heart of each one of us. It is a personal matter to you and to me. There is ever the subtle temptation to unbelief, to a loosening of our hold upon the Christian faith. When we see Christians careless about Church-going, treating Sunday as a day for pleasure or for ordinary

That spirit is always trying to master us, and to drag us away as a captive spoil from the army of our great Captain, Jesus Christ. The destruction and misery which antichrist has brought upon the world is a symbol of the ruin which he brings to each soul that allows itself to be led away from its allegiance to Christ. And the only way to overcome is to fill ourselves with the spirit of Christ, so that antichrist will find no room in our hearts. ### DONATION FROM TAMWORTH, ONT.

The above committee wish to express their sincere thanks for the splendid contribution to the work, sent in through the energy and kindness of Mrs. Alma Alkenbrack and her pupils. Two fine quilts, being a tangible proof of their work of love for the suffering, from these young people. The hospital supplies were also most opportune, as well as some excellent clothing for the Belgians. The committee is also very grateful to those who have knitted such fine socks from wool supplied, and are still busy with this work.

The Committee also desire to thank Miss Nellie Close and her workers of Tamworth, most sincerely for their kindness in sending in several parcels of knitted "comforts" from wool supplied.

We have received this week additional letters of thanks, and commendation of our work, from our soldier boys, which gave us much pleasure. All express great satisfaction at the contents of parcels received, and are full of gratitude.

The work of supplies for Northern France is being pushed rapidly forward. Anyone who can contribute the necessary articles, is asked to assist in this work.

The Thursday work-meetings continue as usual, when tea is served; and the committee-room is open besides each Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5.30 o'clock.

A PERIOD OF REST

In the fall of 1914 many dairy cows died off somewhat earlier than usual on account of scarcity of feed.

Others stopped milking because their owners have let them get the habit of putting up their shutters at the same time that the cheese factory boarded up its windows. However long the period of rest may have been, six weeks or four months, cows will soon be ready for business as usual during 1915. Now the point arises, can the period of work be extended?

That means careful preparation in a variety of ways.

One item may well be noted by the dairyman who has not yet endeavored to shorten that rest-period. It does not follow that a cow giving 1,200 pounds of milk or so during her first month will give as much during the whole season as the cow that gives only 800 pounds the first month. The first one may be dry in a little over seven months and then settle down to extended repose, while the second cow will be producing for ten months, enabling her owner to take advantage of good prices in fall and winter. Obviously, therefore, correct judgment as to a cow's production is to be based on a knowledge of the total weight for the season, not for the best month or two only, for that period of rest is a very variable factor.

Keeping track of the weight given by each cow is simplified by using the forms supplied free by the government.

Write to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, for samples of the record forms for three days per month, and those for daily weights. It will be still better to take samples as well so as to learn by the test how much fat each cow gives.

POTASH IN AGRICULTURE.

For many years the Stassfurt mines in Germany have been practically the sole source of the potash compounds used for fertilizing purposes on this continent. Among the evil effects resulting from the present war, therefore, may be counted the cutting off from the markets of the world the supply of this material. Dr. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, regards this circumstance as not so serious as some may consider. In order to place his views before the farmers of Canada, Dr. Shutt has issued Circular No. 7 of the Experimental Farms, "Potash in Agriculture". It takes up the subject under several heads and reaches

The Red Cross Society

Remember the Valentine Tea and Promenade Concert in the Town Hall to-night. The Napanee Band will furnish the music, kindly giving their services to the Society. There will be a silver collection at the door. Come and bring your friends.

The thanks of the Society are due to the W.C.T.U., who have so kindly filled the pockets of all the shirts sent by the society with comforts for the soldiers. Boxes of cigarettes donated by friends have also been sent with every shirt.

A box has been sent to headquarters this week containing the following supplies: 5 old table cloths, 3 pairs pillows, 3 pairs pillow slips, 6 wash cloths, 12 lbs. absorbent cotton, 8 lbs. hospital gauze, 450 bandages, 12 large rolls of adhesive plaster, 3 cholera bands, 20 yds. old cotton, 1 lb. of boric acid, 1 lb. of vaseline, 3 pairs of bed socks, 6 towels, 24 hospital shirts and 3 comforters.

We have received so many inquiries in regard to heelless socks that for the benefit of all workers we would say that our instructions from headquarters are that they are not recommended for ordinary wear. They may be used however, for operation socks or bed socks. The work rooms will be open Saturday as usual, but the afternoon tea will be withdrawn to give all an opportunity of hearing Mrs. Needham.

Selby Society of Red Cross workers packed and sent a box Feb. 10th, with 19 flannel day shirts, 10 flannel night shirts, 24 pairs knitted socks, 3 pairs wristlets, 7 small pillows, 100 or more rolls of bandages. Two quilts were quilted and packed in the box of clothing forwarded to the Belgian relief, Montreal. All who have assisted the Society will please accept their thanks.

The sincere thanks of the Society are due Mr. Reuben Schermehorn for generously donating the sum of $100, enabling them to continue the work so much needed. Work will be given out on Feb. 10th.

Deaf Mute Church Work.

Religious work among deaf mutes was established in 1849 by Dr. Galudet, who started a small Bible class for them in a room in the University of New York. The Churchman, an Episcopal weekly, says that at the present time there are thirteen ordained clergymen, twelve of whom are themselves deaf, ministering to the spiritual needs of 35,000 deaf mutes in the United States of whom there are fully 20,000 in the southern section. The salaries of the missionaries to the deaf range from $1,000 to $1,800 annually, and a very few of them have their expenses, in addition, provided.

Don't be persuaded in buying "something just as good," because there is nothing just as good as our new electric louse powder, 25c per lb. at Wallace's Drug Store, sole agents.

For many years the Stassfurt mines in Germany have been practically the sole source of the potash compounds used for fertilizing purposes on this continent. Among the evil effects resulting from the present war, therefore, may be counted the cutting off from the markets of the world the supply of this material. Dr. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, regards this circumstance as not so serious as some may consider. In order to place his views before the farmers of Canada, Dr. Shutt has issued Circular No. 7 of the Experimental Farms, "Potash in Agriculture". It takes up the subject under several heads and reaches the following conclusions:

"It is only our light, sandy and gravelly soils that are markedly deficient in potash and this element is only specially called for by clover, potatoes, roots and heavy crops generally. There is yet some potash in the market though it will probably have to be purchased in the form of a complete fertilizer. We have several Canadian sources of potash available to the farmer—notably liquid manure, wood ashes and sea-weed materials rich in this useful constituent and which are more or less readily obtainable in many parts of the Dominion. And lastly there are the indirect potash fertilizers, which though not adding to the sum total of the soil's potash yet may serve a useful purpose by liberating it in available forms and thus in times such as the present may help to tide us over until potash compounds are once more upon the market."

This circular is available free at the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

WHAT DO YOUR COWS TEST?

Supposing you know one of your cows has a test of 3.4 per cent of fat for the first month she is milking, have you any certainty of what she will test the next two months or the last two? One cow in the herd may keep at that first test for three or four months running, another may give far richer milk the third month and the test may increase steadily; or again, with two cows both increasing in the test during lactation, one may increase far more rapidly than the other. Hence, at the end of the season one cow may have given considerably more fat than another which gave about the same weight of milk.

It will thus be seen that the question of sampling as well as weighing a cow's milk is of great importance. Neither is it sufficient to sample and test the mixed milk of the herd; individual quality is worth study. It should be plainly stated in addition that the times demand more attention being paid to testing, for the simple reason that the general average test seems to be steadily decreasing. As milk is valuable in proportion to its cream, or to its test of fat, it is important for the dairyman to know which are his highest-testing cows. He may want a specially rich milk for his own table use; he may want an extra good price when selling a high-testing cow; he may want to raise heifers likely to test at least as high if not higher than their dams; so evidently it will pay him to know the test of each cow he owns. It is a simple matter to take samples on three days per month, and get a composite sample tested once a month. Ask the factory in your section to do the testing, speak to the dairy recorder about it, or write to the dairy division, Ottawa, for full information about getting your samples tested free.

A relative of one cabinet member recently received from a military detention camp in Germany the official postcard which they are all to send out and on which not but the name of the sender is written.

He recognized the writing as of his imprisoned chauffeur, but signature puzzled him greatly. It E. Splithis. After puzzling over some time it dawned on him the was to be read: "E. Split th". He steamed the postcard and it apart. Inside he found written "They are treating us like c. Hundreds are being murdered."

GETTING INTO RUSSIA.

Rosamond Kershaw gives a leisurely account of her first impressions of Russia in the February CANADA MONTHLY. This is her description of the business of passing the customs.

We arrived on time in Eydtkuh. Swarms of porters dressed in black spun, homemade linen smocks, black trousers stuffed into knee boots, talking the usual polyglot language of the frontier town, seized our luggage. It is the only word to There was no asking "Why your leave in any event."

The military element predominated which we should not have understood here as everywhere else in Russia.

At the door of the station, rather customs room, our passports were taken. As in all frontier towns, long, low tables for the examination of the luggage formed square in the room. In this case wolves stood inside the fold and the sheep, outside. There were many officials; to me the number seemed out of all proportion to the number of travelers arriving. These officials mostly undersized, were decked out in dark uniforms with much gold ornamentation, making them appear shorter than was nature's design. One porter must have been seven feet tall, and several of the dapper long aides who went back and forth with the passports, and much clinking of swords, and clapping together of spurred heels, had tall, fine figure and handsome, mainly faces, but majority had more than a suspicion of the Mongolian, in face and figure add to that their beards and their heathenish language and the ensemble is not prepossessing.

A certain number of passports were handed to each official. We, being English, were reserved until the last and a suspicious looking official to our lot. But looks are deceptive. He only just opened our bags and one box and affixed the green stamp on them. At the same time a check was given to us and on leaving the room we exchanged this check for our passport, which had been decorated with about three square inches of printed Russian matter.

Germany to Starve Prisoners of War

BRITISH LOSSES TOTAL 104,000

Mr. Asquith's announcement in the Commons that the British losses in the western arena of the war—that is,
in France and Belgium—total 104,000 officers and men, gives some indication of the terrible nature of the struggle. Some interesting figures from the United States' Ambassador to Berlin have also been made public regarding the losses of the Prussian army. Up to January 8 they were 153,000 killed, 574,000 wounded and 162,000 missing, of whom the bulk are prisoners of war. If we divide these figures by five we secure a monthly average of 30,600 killed, 148,800 wounded and 32,400 missing. Adding a month's average losses thus ascertained to the Berlin figures as published up to January 8, we find that the losses up to the present time of the Prussians and Badenians are 183, 600 dead, 688,800 wounded and 194,
400 missing. The Saxons, Bavarians and Wurtembergers have their own casualty lists, and of their totals no accurate record is available. The Bavarians are known to have suffered fearfully on the Yser and around Ypres, and their losses have been far higher proportionately than those of the troops whose casualties are recorded in the Berlin lists. The aggregate population of Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg is a little under a fourth of that of the States of the Empire which report their losses through Berlin. If, therefore, we add a fourth only to the losses arrived at from Ambassador Gerard's figures it would seem that the German losses up to the present are 229,500 killed, 861,000 wounded and 243,000
missing, or a total of 1,333,500.

The German army actively engaged in warfare was recently stated by Col. Repington, the well-informed military correspondent of The London Times, to be 4,000,000 men. It would seem, therefore, that a third of Germany's total strength on the battle-line has been put out of action in six months. Carrying forward the same standard of comparison to the coming six months, when Germany will have to call to the colors every man of the eight million available males of service age within the Empire, we find that a year of war on a basis of four million men at the front during the first six months, and eight million during the second six months, will cost her 688,500 dead, 2,583,000 wounded and 729,000 missing, a truly stupendous price to pay for the Kaiser's mad ambition. Looking at the figures in the light of the experience of the past six months they would appear to be an underestimate rather than an exaggeration of the probable casualties.

Britain's losses of 104,000 killed, wounded and missing since August 23 include 19,000 men known to be prisoners in Germany. Of the 85,000 casualties it is reasonable to suppose that at least one in four represents a fatality. The British losses by death in action will number, therefore, not less than 21,000. A considerable proportion of the wounded die in the hospitals, but there are as yet no reliable means of checking over the totals. It is evident from the figures presented that when Kitchener's new armies go into action provision will have to be made by Great Britain for hospital accommodation for a quarter of a million men. Red Cross work is only begun.

Prisoners' Messages Got Thru All Right

An officer of the headquarters staff at Exhibition Park camp, Toronto, as just received a letter from his dest daughter, who is staying in London, England. She visits weekly at one of the homes of members of the British cabinet and hears many cabinet stories—not for publication. A relative of one cabinet member just recently received from a military detention camp in Germany the official postcard which they are allowed to send out and on which nothing at the name of the sender is written. He recognized the writing as that of his imprisoned chauffeur, but the signature puzzled him greatly. It was "Splitthis." After puzzling over it some time it dawned on him that it was as to be read: "E. Split this." He steamed the postcard and it came apart. Inside he found written: "They are treating us like dogs. Hundreds are being murdered."

GETTING INTO RUSSIA.

Rosamond Kershaw gives a lively, sure account of her first impressions of Russia in the February CANADA MONTHLY. This is her description of the business of passing customs.

We arrived on time in Eydtkuhnen. Varns of porters dressed in homespun, homemade linen smocks and sack trousers stuffed into knee boots, speaking the usual polyglot language of the frontier town, seized our hand baggage. It is the only word to use, there was no asking "By your leave," any event.

The military element predominated such we should not have understood as everywhere else in Russia.

At the door of the station, or other customs room, our passports were taken. As in all frontier stations, long, low tables for the examination of the luggage formed a barrier in the room. In this case the elves stood inside the fold and we, sheep, outside. There were many officials; to me the number seemed out of all proportion to the number of travelers arriving. These officials, mostly undersized, were decked out in dark uniforms with much gold ornamentation, making them appear even more portentous than nature's design. A porter must have been seven foot tall, and several of the dapper look-alikes who went back and forth with the passports, and much clinking of swords, and clapping together of spurred heels, had tall, fine figures and handsome, manly faces, but the majority had more than a suspicion of the Mongolian, in face and figure; and to that their beards and their sthenish language and the ensemble not prepossessing.

A certain number of passports were handed to each official. We, being English, were reserved until the last, and a suspicious looking official fell our lot. But looks are deceiving; only just opened our bags and our box and affixed the green stamp them. At the same time a check was given to us and on leaving them we exchanged this check for our passport, which had been decorated with about three square inches of printed Russian matter.

"I—I really don't know exactly where. It was on a savage island, where I was cast away—an island just eight days out of Manila."

"A savage island—from Manila"—A bit of the incredulity had left his manner already. Once more he stooped to examine the necklace. "Yes," he muttered; "the cutting of the stones is different from any I have ever encountered—old Asiatic undoubtedly." Again he turned to her. "How long ago was this, miss? What is this story of being cast away? I do not recollect any wrecks"—

"The Empress," Lucille quietly explained.

"Well, well, well"—he rubbed his hands together in frank amazement—"to think that any one escaped from the wreck of the Empress!" Once more his lips pursed. "But why have you not reached friends?"

"I am Lucille Love," she said quietly. "I cannot go back"—

"Lucille Love, daughter of General Love?" He studied her keenly, nodding his head from side to side. "Yes, yes; your father and I were quite well acquainted when he was stationed at the Presidio here, and you will not go back because of the disgrace that caused you to leave when the orders from Washington were stolen?"

"There was no disgrace," Lucille said, her tones fairly chilling. "The papers were stolen by an outsider, sir. That was why I boarded the Empress. That is why I am here. That is why I seek money; why I am still searching."

"But my dear Miss Love," he smiled, "you must realize that there is not money enough in the establishment to purchase such a wonderful necklace as the one you own. A few stones, possibly, or," he added as an afterthought, "I might purchase an option on the necklace for, say, as much of a reasonable sum as you desire at present and will then look about for a purchaser."

Lucille's face showed her relief.

"I will give you $10,000 for an option to sell the necklace within six months," the man continued quickly. "Meanwhile I will keep it here and give you a receipt for it in order that I may show it to possible customers."

"Ten thousand dollars?" Lucille's eyes were wide in wonderment. It was not ten minutes later, with a mutual promise to say nothing of the transaction, that she left the shop with a certified check for the sum mentioned in her tightly clenched fist, accompanied him to escort her to the dining room.

In the dining room she gave herself over to a mood effervescent as the champagne that bubbled in the glass before her. Loubeque had not proven adamant against the frank admiration which went the length of the room at the appearance of Lucille.

She was playing a part she had never dreamed of playing until she caught sight of her beautiful reflection mirrored back at her from the long glass in her apartment. And a great shame was upon her, even as her growing self disgust divided itself between shame at seeing the great Loubeque falling into the net she was deftly weaving for him. She watched him narrowly, marking the constantly growing boldness of his frank admiration.

A rather pretty girl whirled into the center of the big dining room and with out waiting for the faint murmur of applause that greeted her appearance to subside, began to dance. Lucille noticed that Loubeque had so far given himself over to the spirit of reverie that his dishes went untouched as he watched the indifferent dancing. In expiration came to Lucille. She saw the weak spot in Hugo Loubeque's well nigh perfect armor, thought she saw a method of reaching it. Quietly she excused herself and left the room.

Once at the end of the room her manner changed. Swiftly she turned, taking the direction she had seen the dancer leave and coming into a small room where the entertainers sat. She approached the girl, drawing her to one side.

"If I pay you well," she whispered eagerly, "would you let me dance in your place the next time—pay you—pay you $100—$500?" she added as the girl regarded her suspiciously.

"Five hundred dollars?" Wonderment glinted in the eyes upon her. "What do you want—to get chance at cabaret work?"

"No—no, I can dance, but I merely wish to do it once. There is a reason I cannot explain now. But it means everything to me. Please—please!" Tears glistened in eyes filled to overflowing with such honest pleading that the girl quickly nodded.

"Let's see your work," she demanded. "What line, miss?"

Lucille slowly recalled an old Spanish dance she had learned years before, one she had danced in private theatricals. The cabaret dancer whispered to a young man in the corner who

The voice was hoarse, terrifying in its bitterness, its scorn. Lucille turned, startled; then, involuntarily, her hands reached out toward the man who was standing, tense, a horrified expression of disgust and unbelief upon his countenance.

"Dick!" she quavered.

Lieutenant Gibson moved away as her slender figure swayed toward him. Her hands were upon his wrists. He looked at them a second then slowly detached them and turned away, leaving the great room, leaving behind the woman who had dared everything for him.

And Lucille, the radiant face of a moment before gone into a mask, a frigid, icy mask, watched him as, without turning, he left her alone to fight the battle for him. Loubeque touched her shoulder sympathetically.

"My God!" said Lieutenant Gibson.

"Poor child, Lucille!" he murmured. "It was Gibson. After all you might have believed of him, to have him turn that way instantly!"

"Dick is a man," she smiled sadly. "Man is full of suspicion. But when a woman loves she does not ask for references."

CHAPTER XXII.

On Board the Terror.

LUCILLE awoke to a numbed sense of failure, defeat, of loss irreparable. For a few moments she allowed her head to rest against the pillows, perfectly passive, retracing the course of her efforts in the fight with Loubeque for recovery of the papers up to this disastrous conclusion.

She dressed leisurely and for some time was seated at her window scattering crumbs on the ledge for stray birds. As she crossed the room a moment later a metallic sound struck against her ears again and again before she was even conscious of it. She looked about the room, then made out the sound coming from the window ledge. Curiously she regarded the pigeon strutting about there eagerly de-played about the corners of his hard mouth as he thought of the girl upon the same floor with him, the girl who was the image of the Lucille of forty years ago.

Lucille! He murmured the name over tenderly, even as his finger plucked the precious picture of the girl's mother from his breast pocket. He had treasured that picture above all other possessions these forty years yet now he found himself regarding it merely as the likeness of the daughter. Lucille, the daughter of that other Lucille of the long ago—

He rose impatiently, ashamed of the mellow mood that was upon him, and moved across the floor. The slight swaying of the curtains that connected with the bedroom caught his eye. He did not pause, did not even hesitate but a hard look crept into his eyes. A tapping on the door made him frown impatiently, then answer it smiling to find Lucille, dressed for the street, confronting him.

"Since the mountain won't come to Mohamet, Mohamet must go to the mountain," she quoted with a high laugh, a laugh that belied the worn expression about her lips.

"The mountain certainly knew of no desire"—laughed the spy, frank pleas are on his countenance. "Is it a wall or planned—tea?"

"An invitation to luncheon," she returned, "and I wonder if it would be too much to ask of you to see that they give me a good machine for the afternoon."

"I'll phone," he responded, hardening instantly at the shadow of his pleasure that crossed her face. Evidently she wished to be rid of him. He smiled to think of how close the game was to being finished. Some how, he could not get any acute pleas ure out of it now he looked at this smiling girl and realized that precious few would be the smiles upon the face after he had finished. But, pshaw. Why would his mind persist in thinking of such things? He bowed and repeated the hour of their engagement as she tripped down the hall, then resumed his seat at the table.

From a drawer there he took a small thin mirror which he slipped swiftly into the flap of his glove, then placed the glove upon his hand. A grin expression was on his face as he leaned back in his chair once more, his eyes fastened upon the entrance to the bedroom as revealed to him in the mirror, an automatic pistol gripped in his free hand.

Hour dragged upon the heel of hour. Slowly the gray head of the man swayed from side to side. He caught himself abruptly. Again his head sank toward his chest, this time to remain there. Apparently Loubeque slept as he did everything else, soundly, yet with the least possible amount of effort.

The portieres swayed more and more heavily. Grew the outlines of a human face against the smooth velvet will then look about for a purchaser."

Lucille's face showed her relief. "I will give you $10,000 for an option to sell the necklace within six months," the man continued quickly. "Meanwhile I will keep it here and give you a receipt for it in order that I may show it to possible customers."

"Ten thousand dollars!" Lucille's eyes were wide in wonderment. It was not ten minutes later, with a mutual promise to say nothing of the transaction, that she left the shop with a certified check for the sum mentioned in her tightly clinched fist, accompanied by a clerk.

A strange shadow seemed to have fallen upon her, one which took a large part of the amusement she anticipated getting from her shopping away. She could only ascribe it to meeting with one who had known her father, who unwittingly showed her what the judgment of the world had been in regard to the missing orders, the necessity for immediately foiling Hugo Loubeque.

As she left the bank with the roll of banknotes in her hand and a warning from the clerk still ringing in her ears she thought no longer of adorning herself, had forgotten her shabbiness and her fear of meeting her sweetheart. Her thoughts were still upon clothes, the most gorgeous clothes. And her thoughts were also upon Hugo Loubeque, the international spy, the man who stood between her and the fruition of all her hopes, the man—and a warm flush suffused her cheeks, which she fought down swiftly—who was constantly proving himself but a mere man, after all; a man susceptible to woman's charms.

Her head was high, her cheeks sparkling as she entered the first fashionable shop she came to; her manner such that the crowding, jostling women made way for her as for a queen in regal attire instead of a young girl with habiliments torn and disheveled.

And always, alongside the doors of all the establishments she entered, waiting—patiently waiting, furtively waiting—a rather servile appearing man stood, respectful, quiet, contained.

Lucille's return to her apartment at the hotel was greeted with an apparent respect that spoke plainly of the arrival of the flood of packages she had ordered sent immediately that she might prepare herself for the conquest of Loubeque.

It was several hours later that she looked at herself in the long cheval glass, frank admiration and wonder tingling within her, mantling her cheeks with roses that no ruby necklaces could have purchased. For the first time she realized that she was wonderfully beautiful. And even as she stood there came a clear tapping upon the door. With a smile upon her lips she moved toward it, allowing it to open the slightest fraction at a time.

Hugo Loubeque stepped within, immaculate in his evening clothes, and bowed gravely, his eyes taking her in from head to toe, frank admiration glowing in them.

"You will dine with me?" His manner was courteous as ever, yet there was a change. Something already was lost between them, some of the strands which bound them together slackened, dropped apart never to be put together again.

Lucille merely nodded. Her heart was growing larger and larger, and she found herself frightened. She rested her hand upon his sleeve and al-ret work?"

"No—no, I can dance, but I merely wish to do it once. There is a reason I cannot explain now. But it means everything to me. Please—please"—Tears glistened in eyes filled to overflowing with such honest pleading that the girl quickly nodded.

"Let's see your work," she demanded. "What line, miss?"

Lucille slowly recalled an old Spanish dance she had learned years before, one she had danced in private theatricals. The cabaret dancer whispered to a young man in the corner who took his guitar from its case and thrummed lightly until Lucille nodded.

"You'll do," the girl said five minutes later, then, with a tinge of envy in her voice and eyes, "dead sure you ain't after me job?"

Lucille pressed the money upon her, warmly assuring her over and over again that such was not her intention.

"All right then. You're due in half an hour. I'll fix it with the manager and put the orchestra leader wise to the game. The dress ain't quite the stuff fer"—

Lucille nodded gayly. Hurriedly she scribbled a note to Loubeque, reassuring him as to her delay and begging him to wait a short time until she came. Then she darted to her suit, fairly tearing her gown from her in her haste. She did not know what odd whimsy had induced her to purchase the little coquettish stuff of a dancing gown that fitted the part she intended playing so perfectly.

A bit breathless she returned to the cabaret. The girl gave her a shove forward and she found herself standing in the big room, heard, as from a long way off, the stringed orchestra brilliantly playing "La Paloma."

"G'wan! Beat it!" It was the voice of the cabaret dancer.

Lucille knew then that she must go through with what she had started. Taking a long breath, her body swayed to the strains. Slowly, gracefully she glided into the room, her face partially concealed by the mantilla. A gasp of surprise followed her appearance, men and women leaned forward, forgetful of their dinner, lured by her infectious grace and charm. But she had eyes for but one man, the international spy, who, a surprised, puzzled expression on his face, leaned far forward in his chair, watching this woman who danced so wonderfully.

Then suddenly the music changed. Lucille flashed a glance at Loubeque and from that moment danced to him and him alone. It was perfectly obvious to every one in the room. The spy sank back in his chair, a bit embarrassed but quite aglow with delight. The music was growing slower, slower, and, with a trickling laugh of happy merriment, Lucille flung wide her mantilla and bowed mockingly to the arch-spy.

For just a second his splendid mouth gaped, then, with eyes that shot strange fires at her, his palms cracked vigorously together as he led off the whirlwind of applause that set the glasses and cutlery dancing. The orchestral leader waved his baton toward Lucille for an encore, and from her chair opposite Loubeque, into which she had sunk, she half rose to respond with a bow.

"My God!"

ing the course of her efforts in the fight with Loubeque for recovery of the papers up to this disastrous conclusion.

She dressed leisurely and for some time was seated at her window scattering crumbs on the ledge for stray birds. As she crossed the room a moment later a metallic sound struck against her ears again and again before she was even conscious of it. She looked about the room, then made out the sound coming from the window ledge. Curiously she regarded the pigeon strutting about there eagerly devouring the crumbs. Upon his leg she saw a tiny brass cylinder, tap, tap, tapping with his every step.

Her heart gave her a warning, thumping violently even as she recognized the pretty creature for a carrier bird. Stepping quietly to the window of her bedroom, she stared about her, a smile crossing her face as by careful count she made out the crumbs upon the eighth window ledge from hers. That would be Hugo Loubeque's apartment.

Swiftly, softly, tremulously, for fear the bird might have fled, Lucille reached the ledge, her voice low and caressing as she reached and clasped him firmly. In a second she had detached the cylinder, taking the tiny tissue paper note from it:

Arrangements complete. Deliver papers to Ensign Howell, U. S. ship Terror, with affidavit as to sale by General Sumpter Love, now under trial, Washington, D. C. At your residence; 5:30.

Lucille gasped as she took in the meaning of the message. For just a moment she sat staring dully ahead of her, dismay and terror frozen in her eyes. At 5:30 the international spy's work would be completed and her father ruined.

She clinched her fists tightly together, pacing up and down the floor of her suit, her pretty teeth fastened upon her under lip, her very being vibrant with protest at the horrible injustice of it all. It must not be. It could not be. She stopped suddenly. It should not be. Calmly she crossed to the writing desk and added a line through the hour appointed, carefully making an eight of the five. She scanned the result of her labors with knitted brows.

She loosed the pigeon, pointing him toward a window which was open. She knew Loubeque was growing impatient from that sign. Furtively she watched the eager hands clutch the bird and draw him from view. The window slapped shut once more.

His residence she knew must mean the house of mystery, the weird place of horrors, of sliding staircases and folding rooms. That Loubeque should choose such a rendezvous showed how plainly he considered the last trick in the game of his life played, how absolutely assured he now was of absolute and final success. At 5:30 Ensign Howell would be at that house. She had three hours wherein to work.

She rose and moved toward the door, closing it softly behind her. For a moment she hesitated in the hall, then stepped boldly to the suit of the spy, rapping upon the door.

Hugo Loubeque, master of men and nations, whose power was so great the course of empires halted at his spoken word of command, moodily stared out his window after the carrier pigeon he had just released. For forty years he had bent every energy of his life for this day. And now that it had come, somehow the sweet had turned bitter upon his palate.

Strangely enough, a tender smile

more heavily. Grew the outlines of a human face against the smooth velvet.

"Keep the hand in the pocket."

Through the opening came a pair of furtive eyes. Slowly, slowly, the face of Thompson showed. He did not bother to look at the slumberer. Before revealing himself he had made sure that his old master slept soundly. Swift, certain, sure, he moved beyond the curtains.

Closer, closer, a step at a time, he advanced. The hate had left his eyes for there was no time for hate when bent on business. Almost close enough to reach out and rest a hand upon Loubeque's shoulder he was when he halted, his mouth dropping miserably open, his feet apparently gummed to the carpet, his fingers twitching uncertainly, his eyes fastened in amaze at his own face as it stared back at him from the tiny mirror.

As he recovered, his hand darting swiftly toward his pocket, the sinister laughter of his master broke the silence.

"Keep the hand in the pocket Thompson. Keep it there or I shall be obliged to shoot and miss the place."

The butler-thief's upper lip curled back from his teeth, giving him the expression of an angry mongrel dog.

"And you thought to play with me!" Loubeque murmured wonderingly more to himself than to his captive. "The man who knows me better than any one else thought to catch Loubeque sleeping. You dared come near me after the second affair. If I but had the time I should strangle you with these hands. They itch for the fee of your throat once more. I have a little favor to ask you"—

The thief growled something inarticulate, and his eyes glittered venomously as he fastened them upon the toes of his boots.

"Now, Thompson, just step to the telephone and call up the desk down stairs." He made a significant little gesture with the revolver in his hand and the man hurriedly took down the receiver, his face a pasty yellow.

"Say there is a hotel sneak thief in Mr. Loubeque's apartment waiting to

He did not pause, did not even hesitate, but a hard look crept into his eyes. Tapping on the door made him move impatiently, then answer it, willing to find Lucille, dressed for the street, confronting him.

"Since the mountain won't come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain," she quoted with a light laugh, a laugh that belled the worn expression about her lips.

"The mountain certainly knew of no Mahomet"—laughed the spy, frank pleasure on his countenance. "Is it a walk you planned—tea?"

"An invitation to luncheon," she returned, "and I wonder if it would be much to ask of you to see that they give me a good machine for the afternoon."

"I'll phone," he responded, hardening instantly at the shadow of disapproval that crossed her face. Evidently she wished to be rid of him. He smiled to think of how close the time was to being finished. Somehow, he could not get any acute pleasure out of it now he looked at this smiling girl and realized that precious smile would be the smiles upon that face after he had finished. But, pshaw! why would his mind persist in thinking of such things? He bowed and repeated the hour of their engagement. She tripped down the hall, then removed his seat at the table.

From a drawer there he took a small, a mirror which he slipped swiftly to the flap of his glove, then placed the glove upon his hand. A grim expression was on his face as he leaned back in his chair once more, his eyes fastened upon the entrance to the room as revealed to him in the mirror, an automatic pistol gripped in his free hand.

Four dragged upon the heel of hour. Only the gray head of the man layed from side to side. He caught himself abruptly. Again his head sank toward his chest, this time to remain there. Apparently Loubeque slept as he did everything else, soundly, yet with the least possible amount of effort.

The portieres swayed more and more heavily. Grew the outlines of a man face against the smooth velvet.

be arrested. Mr. Loubeque has no time to make charges now, but will return shortly or meet the procession downstairs."

The receiver dropped clattering from the thief's hand. Loubeque waved the automatic quietly toward it and, as the pitiful eyes of his former servant met his own, they read no pity there—nothing save a cold, vindictive intent. The trembling hand took up the receiver once more and, word for word, transmitted the message as it fell like icy particles from the spy's lips. Then Thompson whirled toward him.

"Turn me over, will you? Well, listen to what's coming to you when you do it. I know a thing or two!"

"You know too much," smiled the spy coolly. "That is exactly the reason I am disposing of!"

"And I know about her." The thief's hand waved toward the corridor. "Maybe I can't tell a thing or two about you and her. What's she doing here—what's the reason she got on the Empress and stuck to you ever since?"

The revolver slapped against the opposite wall as Loubeque hurried it at the man's head, following it with his flying body, his frame crashing the man to the floor, his fingers groping for the vile mouth that spluttered on.

"I ain't saying as what you and me know—I'm saying as what I can tell and what it'll look like. What?"

Loubeque turned his head suddenly, his ears fairly peaked with the eagerness of his listening. The rattle of the elevator outside reached his ears. He sprang to his feet, dragging the butler after him.

"We must get out," he breathed hoarsely. "We must away before they come. I'll—I'll kill you—for this!"

Swiftly the pair darted through the door and down the hall. Loubeque hurriedly twisted the knob to Lucille's door. It flung open. With a gasping sob of relief he dragged Thompson after him and slapped the door shut, maintaining his hold meantime.

"And that is what you would say—would tell?" His voice was not harsh, not even indignant, merely curious.

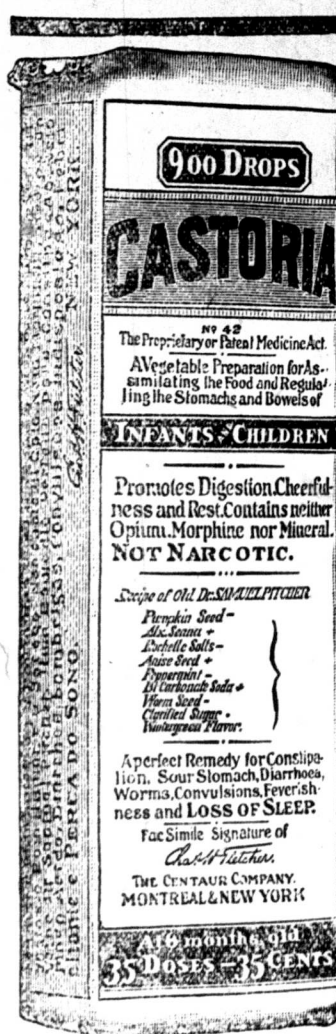

"That's what!" Thompson straightened, a touch of braggadocio about his very figure.

Slowly, inexorably, the fingers of Hugo Loubeque reached out and grasped the man's wrists. Slowly, inexorably, he pressed the cold metal of the automatic iron into the useless palm. Slowly, inexorably, that weapon-bearing hand was lifted, lifted until it pressed against the blue lips of the thief, then stopped. Loubeque's voice was soft, purring, soothing.

"Open the teeth, my old friend—open them or I'll knock them out! Put the gun inside your mouth. It's simple—only a second—then a longer trip than you've ever taken before. Don't fight—it's useless—you should know that. Surely you won't resist and make it hard for your master. Just think—if you don't—I might be called—a murderer—while—if you follow instructions—it's—just—suicide!"

With every syllable he rendered the wrists of the struggling man more feeble, forced the steel muzzle of the gun more and more harshly against the tender gums. As he pronounced his final judgment, the judgment he hoped would prove that of a coroner, the muffled shot beat against the walls of the room. Thompson writhed, then straightened. Loubeque held tightly to the wrists until rigor mortis gripped them about the weapon.

TORTURE OF THE "PICKET."

A Form of Military Punishment In England In Bygone Days.

The "picket," an ingenious form of punishment in use in England in the days of old, was generally inflicted on cavalry and artillery men and was a singularly brutal bit of torture.

A long post, near which stood a stool, was driven into the ground. The delinquent was ordered to mount the stool, and his right hand was fastened to a hook in the post by a noose, drawn up as high as it could be stretched, round his wrist. A stump the height of the stool, with its end cut to a round and blunt point, was also driven into the earth close to the post.

Then the stool was taken away, and the sufferer had nothing to rest his bare feet upon but the stump, "which, though it did not usually break the skin," says Captain Grose, "put him in great torture, his only means of relief being by resting his weight on his wrist, the pain of which soon became intolerable."

One can very well believe him, especially when he makes the addition that a man was not infrequently left to stand in this position for half an hour, although the orthodox period of endurance was fifteen minutes.—London Graphic.

Tennis as a Test.

Tennis is a sure revealer of character. Three sets with a man suffice to give one a working knowledge of his moral equipment; six, of his chief mental traits, and a dozen, of that most important and usually veiled part of him, his subconscious personality. Young people of opposite sexes are sometimes counseled to take a long railway journey together before deciding on a matrimonial merger. But I would respectfully advise them rather to play "singles" with each other before venturing upon a continuous game of doubles.—Robert H. Schaffler in Atlantic.

Gooseberries as a Tonic.

A supposed authority strongly recommends gooseberries, cooked, of course, as a tonic better than the finer berries generally in the market. The gooseberry has an acid not to be found in other small berries, or perhaps it is a salt. Anyhow, they are good and health giving. There we go following a custom of England, where the gooseberry has been the main feature of tarts, famed in song and story.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

Loubeque held tightly to the wrists until rigor mortis grip- ped them about the weapon.

As Lucille stood in the doorway of Loubeque's room, her eyes always keenly suspicious to the slightest trifle when about the man, observing that as he talked with her his eyes were fastened upon the gloved hand, in- stantly it had struck her as strange he should wear a glove in his room. Then she caught the reflection of his eyes and saw the mirror flashing in that palm—the eyes of the man watching the curtains leading to his bedcham- ber. They swayed slightly. Then she made her adieu, for she knew Lou- beque was not alone.

In her own room she paced the floor nervously. What did it mean? Some one had entered Loubeque's room, was spying upon him, and the surreptitious presence had been discovered. The visitor was under surveillance. But who could that visitor be? What was his motive?

Thompson—Gibson! Gibson—Thomp- son. Her sweetheart and the butler- thief both might have motives for such an entry. That it related to the stolen papers she had no doubt. Suppose they were taken by some other just at this last moment? But the man behind the curtains had little if any chance against Loubeque.

The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most depend- able way, with the least possible work.

THE AMERICAN FARMER.

It is true that the American farmer does not produce as much per acre as the farmer in a number of civilized nations, but production per acre is not the American standard. The standard is the amount of produce for each person engaged in agriculture, and by this test the American farmer appears to be from two to six times as efficient as most of his competitors. Relatively speaking, extensive farming is still economically the sound program in our agriculture, but now it is becoming increasingly apparent that the aim must be, while maintaining supremacy in production for each person, to establish supremacy in production for each acre.—From Annual Report, 1914, of Secretary of Agriculture.

WINTER WHEAT.

Since the introduction of hardy varieties of winter wheat from southeastern Europe the winter wheat area in this country has expanded steadily northward. It has been found by experience that winter wheat in general gives larger yields than spring wheat, because of its greater drought resistance and its earlier maturity, which enables it to escape hail, winds, disease, etc. In Iowa, for example, the average yields for five years show an advantage of 4.8 bushels in favor of winter wheat over spring wheat, and a four year test in Minnesota was even more favorable, showing an advantage of 8.5 bushels. A great number of varieties, however, of winter wheat make a careful selection on the part of the farmer advisable.

A POTATO WAREHOUSE.

Six Specific Requisites to Be Borne in Mind in Building One.

By R. M. DOLVE.

(North Dakota agricultural experiment station.)

The specific things to bear in mind in the construction of potato warehouses are temperature, ventilation, soil drainage, convenience, durability and cost.

Temperature.—The ideal temperature in a potato warehouse is between 33 and 35 degrees Fahrenheit. Although provision should be made for heating during extreme weather, the house should be so constructed that the proper temperature can be maintained during cold weather without the use of artificial heat. The objection to artificial heat is that it is impossible to maintain an even temperature throughout the entire house. The temperature of potatoes near the stove will invariably be too high while potatoes may be freezing in remote parts of the house.

Ventilation.—Provision must be made for ventilation so as to maintain the proper temperature, the requisite purity of air and a desirable dryness of atmosphere. The scheme of ventilation should be so arranged that it is under easy control of the caretaker. To this end the walls of the house must be as good nonconductors of heat as is consistent with economy in construction. All doors should be double and as tight as possible.

The temperature in a warehouse will gradually rise toward spring, but a properly constructed one may be kept at the desired temperature for a long time by ventilating at night and shutting the house as tightly as possible during the day time.

POTTING OF PLANTS.

It Is Absolutely Necessary to Have Good Soil.

"To have the best of success in the raising of plants it is absolutely necessary to have good soil," says M. F. Ahearn, associate professor of horticulture in the Kansas state agricultural college. "As a rule, there is only one way to get a good soil, and that is to mix it yourself."

A workable soil may be made from loam, sand and manure, but it will be greatly improved if leaf mold or peat is added.

Here are some directions given by Professor Ahearn for the preparation of loam used for the potting of plants: "The best loam for plants is made of well decayed sod taken from a pasture. After the grass has been killed by hard freezes in the fall the sod should be cut three or four inches deep and placed in a pile, the grass side down. For the sake of convenience make the pile three or four feet wide and as high and as long as necessary. Hollow out the top so as to catch the rains. If the year is a dry one a garden hose may be used to supply the moisture. In the construction of this pile alternate layers of sod and manure should be used. This compost should be allowed to weather for at least a year, preferably two years, before being used. When ready to be used it should be chopped and thoroughly mixed with well rotted manure."

The addition of leaf mold, peat or muck to this loam makes the potting soil more friable, increases its capacity of holding water, aids the circulation of air through the loam and induces a better growth of roots.

Farm and Garden

WINTER WASTE OF MANURE.

How It May Be Prevented in the Barnyard.

Because of snowfall and snow melting, wet weather and some hard and beating rains at intervals through the winter that season is the one in which the losses of barnyard manure are always very heavy. In handling barnyard manure the farmer can save or lose the equivalent of many dollars every year. Winter is the one season when he should guard against these losses.

There are always weeks upon weeks of bad weather, when the farmer does not feel like getting out with the spreader and getting rid of the increasing accumulations. Possibly before this manure can be moved a heavy rain or a series of freezes, sudden thaws and heavy rains will appear. The more water falls on the exposed piles of this fertilizer the less actual fertility there will be left in it.

A pile of manure heats or it becomes a hotbed of germ activities. A part of the very valuable nitrogen in the manure is changed into ammonia and vanishes into the air. Some of the nitrogen is changed over into nitrates, and it is this part of the manure that is dissolved and carried away by the running water.

The soil around a manure heap out in the open always testifies to this waste. You can see the waste in the brown and reddish brown water that runs away from the manure heap after a rain or during a thaw. All the strength is washed out of it if the manure remains exposed long enough, and no great stretch of time is necessary to spoil much of its usefulness.

This is the one year in the memory of most of us when it is absolutely necessary that no manure be allowed to waste. The fertilizer market is very unsettled. The stoppage of potash shipments has created much uneasiness among manufacturers of the commercial fertilizers. There is quite a little potash in the country, but no one pretends there is enough. The shortage may not be felt very keenly this coming summer, but if the war is continued for even a few months longer there will be a shortage that will be undeniable. The one practical substitute we have in this country is stable manure. It therefore becomes far more valuable than it was a few months ago.

Of course the concrete manure pit is the last word in manure preservation. It holds the liquid as well as the solid parts of the manure, and the liquid parts are certainly more valuable than the solids. Where the concreted manure pit is out of the question the next best thing is to store it somewhere under shelter. Of course the spreader should be used steadily if the fields to be manured are in shape to receive it. When labor and field conditions permit manure should be spread on the ground to be benefited as soon as possible.—Farm Progress.

be so arranged that it is under easy control of the caretaker. To this end the walls of the house must be as good nonconductors of heat as is consistent with economy in construction. All doors should be double and as tight as possible.

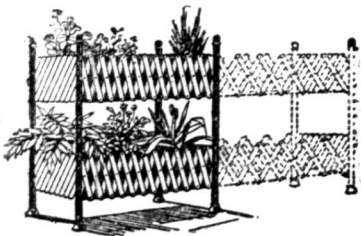

The temperature in a warehouse will gradually rise toward spring, but a properly constructed one may be kept at the desired temperature for a long time by ventilating at night and shutting the house as tightly as possible during the day time.

Soil Drainage.—When a potato warehouse of the basement type is to be constructed the height of the water table in the ground during seasons when potatoes may be stored should be investigated. If there is danger of water and there is no means of removing it, it is better to place the basement floor above the danger line and to grade up around the house until it is buried to the desired depth.

Durability and Cost.—In well drained soils that do not cave readily, quite satisfactory basement warehouses have been constructed, at small cost, that consist merely of a roofed over excavation with walls having a slope of 1 to 1. In most localities, however, this is not practical, and where potato growing is taken up as a permanent business a more durable warehouse should be constructed. To insure durability all underground construction should be of stone, brick or concrete, and in most instances concrete will be found cheapest and best suited for basements. Care must be taken to insure that all planks, joists and supports of driving floors have ample strength to support the heavy loads as well as the dead weight of potatoes which may be stored on the floor. Roughly, the cost of a large first class potato warehouse will amount to about 10 cents per bushel of its storage capacity. That is, a good 10,000 bushel warehouse, for example, will cost about $1,000 so that 10 cents per bushel on the first crop stored pays for the warehouse.

Adjustable Flower Stand.

To Destroy Weeds in Walks.

There is no need of weeds in walks or paths. Either salt or blue vitriol boiled in water a pound to the gallon and sprayed on boiling hot with a watering pot will kill them. About a gallon to the square yard will cure the most stubborn case, and the cure lasts for years.

Danger of Dingy Stables.

There are thousands of dingy stables that might be sweetened and brightened immeasurably by sweeping and cleaning out the dust and cobwebs of years, giving the place a treatment with sulphur or other disinfectant and applying a coat of good whitewash to the walls and partitions, and seeing that it reaches every crack and crevice.

THE COW AND THE DAIRY.

It is the cow and not the capital that makes or breaks the dairyman. Neither elaborate equipment nor expensive feed can make a dairy profitable if the cows are poor. In so far as the cow is an efficient machine for turning feed into milk and fat, her owner will succeed, and nothing can save him if she is lacking in such efficiency.

The cow is distinctively the most courteous animal in the world. She always responds to better treatment. What shall we say for some of the men who own her and use her with a nigardliness that shows how little they know of a cow and how little they appreciate her?

It is impossible to induce the cow to give returns before she provides for her own wants. She will use all the food she needs before she will begin to pay for what she gets. What the man who gives his cows a short ration saves in feed represents the feed that would be used by the good cow in making returns.

Keeping steadily at a thing usually produces the best results, and many of our best dairy cows are those which do not give the large amounts of milk for a brief period, but give a fair quantity and keep it up a long time. It is not what a cow can perform in a week or month that determines her value. It is what she is able to do in a year or lifetime that determines this.

WEBWORM AND ALFALFA.

The Missouri College of Agriculture Is Studying the Pest.

The Missouri College of Agriculture has received reports of a small greenish caterpillar with black spots, which destroys the alfalfa crops. This little caterpillar is one of the so called web worms, and in earlier days it was called the "garden web worm" on account of its injury to truck crops. On maturing it spins a small cocoon, from which emerges a small yellowish brown moth. In this latitude there seems to be three broods during the summer and fall. The last brood of worms is due to appear soon if it has not already arrived.

Several native weeds, including the common pig weed, garden crows, clover and alfalfa, all furnish food for this caterpillar. In earlier years it has been injurious to clover in Missouri, but this is the first year it has done much injury to alfalfa. It feeds on the leaves and tender shoots and spins a considerable amount of silk for tying together the leaves and stems. When abundant it leaves but little foliage on the plants, and what little is left is badly webbed. The crop is not likely to be killed unless the attack be unusually severe or unless it occurs during a severe drought.

The only feasible method of reaching the pest is to cut the crop when badly attacked, even though it may not be ready to cut. This will help to check the work of the pest, and if the alfalfa be cut at the right time, when most of the caterpillars are inclosed in cocoons, they will be removed from the field with the hay, and few of the moths will get back to lay eggs for the next brood of worms. Clean culture so as to keep down all pig weeds and other plants on which they feed in or near alfalfa fields will help to prevent the pest from getting a start in alfalfa.

Control of Black Knot.

Black knot, a fungous disease of cherries and plums, is controlled by cutting out and burning all evidences of the knot several times a year and using bordeaux mixture once late in winter, again when buds begin to swell and two or three applications at intervals of ten days. The best time to find disease bunches is when the foliage is gone.

Small furnishings add so much beauty and comfort of a room they are always especially tempting the wise shopper. There are charming little mirrors set in mahogany frames and hung from waho frames on a little crossbar swar two uprights. It is just like a big glass, only that it stands not more ten inches high.

Children's Storm Capes.

There is a new storm cape for children. It is so long it is practical sleeveless raincoat. It is full lined on the inside and plaid cloth the outside.

Fashion demands that every girl shall have shoes to harmonize.

The top of the new laced gaiter boot is either of dark gray or f buckskin.

Walking shoes are made with cloth or buckskin tops in pale shades gray or tan.

Bathtub Ball.

"It used to be a terrible task to bathe my baby, as he was so afraid of water," one mother says. "One day I threw a small celluloid ball in the tub, and it bounced around so enticingly that baby's attention was diverted in trying to catch the elusive thing, and his bath was finished with comfort."

"Since then I have bought half a dozen of the pretty balls to be exclusively in the bathroom."

"Baby fairly squeals with delight when he sees preparations going for his morning plunge."

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Story of a Very Little Girl Who Went to School.

A VENTURESOME JOURNEY.

Stole Away From Home When Her Mother Was Not Looking—Games and Information For Small People—A New Mystery Trick.

The scholars in a school in Bronx borough, a part of New York city, were delighted not long ago when a little visitor entered the classroom unannounced. She walked right into the room and took a seat before the surprised teacher could say a word. She informed the teacher that she wanted to be a scholar. The little miss was

ERNESTINE LINDAUER.

Ernestine Lindauer, three years old. In a few minutes Ernestine's mother appeared and took her home. It appears that Ernestine has been anxious to go to school, the sight of her older playmates on their way exciting her curiosity. So on the day in question she slipped out of her house, equipped with a bag and mother's umbrella, and made her first trip to school. As soon as she was missed her mother hurried to the schoolhouse, feeling that the runaway would be there. As it happened, a photographer was taking pictures of the schoolhouse that day, and he snapped Ernestine as she entered the door.

A New "Mystery" Trick.

A trick that will cause a good deal of amusement and mystification among young folks is played as follows:

A small, bare table is placed in the center of the room in sight of every one. Two silver coins—say twenty-five cent pieces—are placed on the table some distance apart, one at the right hand, one at the left.

A member of the company, who may be called Sally, takes her place by the table, and another, whom we may call Jack, leaves the room.

Sally places her hands, or, rather, her finger tips, lightly upon the table before the two coins close to them, but not touching them, one to the right, one to the left.

"Now," says Sally, smiling at the company, "this is an experiment in telepathy. I will move one of these coins, and Jack will enter and without word or sign from me will tell you which coin I moved. Which shall it be?"

The company says, "The coin on your left."

Sally with her left hand takes the left hand coin, raises it above her head and waves it in a mysterious manner.

She then places the coin back on the table just as it was and her hand just as it was and summons Jack into the room.

He enters, glances carelessly at the coins and without an instant's hesitation says, "Left."

The trick is tried again and again. Neither Jack nor Sally can be detected in the least collusion.

Indeed, there is really no necessity for any of the usual signs, for if those present are gifted with the power of keen observation they will notice that the hand that was raised above the head is for the moment very much whiter than the hand that remained on the table.

If the reader will try standing beside a table, allowing one hand to rest upon it while the other is for a moment held aloft, he will find that the test never fails.—Youth's Companion.

Taking Warning.

Zoroaster, the revealer, visited the place of eternal fires. There, in a group of kings, he saw one with a single foot. He turned to the master.

"Why," he asked, "is the king mutilated?"

"In all his life," the mighty one replied, "he performed but one kind act. Seeing a camel tethered with so short a rope that it could not reach the trough in which its food was placed, this king kicked the vessel where the hungry one could feed from it. For this good deed his foot passed into heaven and the rest of him was thrown here."

They walked on.

"No good deed is wasted," said the master.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Only Told the Truth.

When he was a student at Heidelberg John Sharp Williams was regarded as having the most robust imagination in the student body. That truth is stronger than fiction, however, was proved one day at his boarding place, when the future United States senator chanced to describe the kind of potatoes he had been raised on in his native Mississippi. They were so unlike potatoes as the German people knew them that the whole proposition was beyond belief. Yet John Sharp had done nothing but describe the ordinary sweet potato of every day commerce.—New York Sun.

Food of the Barn Owl.

The barn owl is one of the most beneficial of the birds of prey, since it feeds almost exclusively on small mammals that injure farm produce, nursery and orchard stock. It eats pocket gophers, field mice, common rats, house mice, harvest mice, kangaroo rats and cotton rats. It occasionally captures a few birds and insects. This species of owl should be protected throughout its entire range.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE. Feb. 3rd, 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-tives'. While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take 'Fruit-a-tives' for they are the medicine that cures."

MAGLOIRE PAQUIN

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FLINGING THE CHAKRI.

One of the Dexterous Feats of the Clever Hindus of Gwalior.

There is a curious custom in Gwalior, India, the seat of Jain and early Hindu antiquities. In front of the mausoleum of a holy saint—Mohammed Ghous—a fair is held annually on the outskirts of Gwalior town about the middle of the rainy season. The most noticeable feature of the fair is the chakri throw.

A chakri is a piece of iron something like a spindle, over which a long piece of string or thread is rolled. The player throws high into the air the iron chakri (literally a roll), holding one end of the string in his hand, and gives it a swing and jerk in such a clever manner that the chakri on coming down rolls up the thread around itself and is caught in the hands of the thrower.

The art has been dexterously practiced by a class of people for ages past, and some members are so renowned that they cut a good figure at the scene. It is most interesting to watch the thrower fling the chakri up high, catch it in his hands on return and continue sending it up again and again till the rope becomes as high as seventy feet above the ground. There is absolutely no spring or lever attachment in the chakri. Nabbo is the champion thrower. — London Strand Magazine.

Drawing the Line.

"I want you to read my speeches," said the candidate.

"Couldn't think of it," replied Mr. Dustin Stax.

"Why, I thought you would be interested. You have always subscribed to my campaign fund."

"Yes, I'm glad to be an old subscriber. But I'm hanged if I'll be a constant reader."

CARE OF COOKING UTENSILS.

The up to date housewife taboos all heavy cooking utensils. Those of light aluminium, granite and double plated tin save energy.

Tinware may be cleaned with very little trouble by using dry flour applied with a piece of newspaper.

Pie tins greased with butter will make the bottom crust of pies flaky and prevent them from being soggy.

When using a double boiler the food will cook more quickly if the water in the outer vessel is salted in the proportion of a fourth of a cupful of salt to one quart of water.

An oven that is constantly in use requires to be kept scrupulously clean. It should not only have the shelves scrubbed out with soda occasionally, but in addition the shelves should be painted with quicklime two or three times a year. An oven treated in this way never becomes caked with grease, and there is no unpleasant smell when it is being used.

Mahogany Frames.

Small furnishings add so much to the duty and comfort of a room that they are always especially tempting to the wise shopper. There are some charming little mirrors set in mahogany frames and hung from mahogany mes on a little crossbar swung in uprights. It is just like a big pier glass, only that it stands not more than inches high.

Children's Storm Capes.

There is a new storm cape for children. It is so long it is practically a useless raincoat. It is full rubbered on the inside and plaid cloth on outside.

CORRECT FOOTWEAR.

Button boots are the correct style. Bronze slippers are used as much as silk for afternoon wear.

Fashion demands that every gown should have shoes to harmonize.

The top of the new laced gaiter top is either of dark gray or fawn skin.

Walking shoes are made with cloth buckskin tops in pale shades of tan or tan.

The heel of a low shoe slips line inner sides of the heel with velvet, which will cling to the hose.

For every day there is no better mode of dressing a child's feet than brown, black or white shoes, with laces to match.

Bathtub Ball.

It used to be a terrible task to bathe a baby, as he was so afraid of the water, one mother says. "One day I saw a small celluloid ball in the water and it bounced around so enticingly that baby's attention was diverted trying to catch the elusive plaything, and his bath was finished in short order."

Since then I have bought half a dozen of the pretty balls to be used exclusively in the bathroom.

Baby fairly squeals with delight when he sees preparations going on for his morning plunge."

The Empire's Call to Farmers

"Approximately twenty million men have been mobilized in Europe. A large proportion of these have been withdrawn from the farms of the countries at war. Even in neutral countries large numbers of food producers have been called from the land to be ready for emergencies. It is difficult for us to realize what will be the effect on food production through the withdrawal of several million men from all the great agricultural countries of Europe. These millions cease to be producers, they have become consumers, —worse still, they have become destroyers of food."

HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

Britain must have food—food this year, and food next year. Britain is looking to Canada to supply most of that food. We are sending our surplus now, but we must prepare for a larger surplus this year and next year. Patriotism and Production must go hand in hand.

Because of this need of the Empire for more food, and the call to Canada in that need, the Canadian Department of Agriculture has arranged for a series of Conferences throughout the Dominion with the object of giving suggestions as to the best ways of increasing production of the particular products needed at this time. At these conferences agricultural specialists, who have studied agricultural conditions and production throughout the world, and the best means of increasing agricultural production in Canada, will give valuable information and suggestions to the farmers, live-stock men, dairymen, poultrymen, vegetable growers, and other producers of this country. The Canadian Department of Agriculture urges you to attend as many of these Conferences as possible, also to watch for other information on the subject that will be given in other announcements in this newspaper.

ATTEND YOUR CONFERENCE

Put Energy into Production of Staple Foods

The Government does not ask farmers to work harder, so much as it urges them to make their work more productive, and to produce those staple foods that the Empire most needs and that can be most easily stored and transported.

Europe, and particularly Britain, will need the following staple foods from Canada more than ever before:—

Wheat, oats, corn, beans, peas. Beef, mutton, bacon and ham. Cheese and butter.

Poultry and eggs.

Vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, and turnips.

The larger the yield of these staple food products, the greater the service to the Empire. Germany in the last ten years has doubled the average yield of the majority of her field crops largely through better seed, thorough cultivation and use of fertilizer. And while the Empire's armies are busy putting down German Militarism, let us at home appropriate the best of Germany's agricultural tural methods for the Empire's advantage.

The Government urges farmers, stockmen, dairymen and other producers to make a wider use of the Free Bulletins issued by the Canadian Department of Agriculture. Clip out, fill in and mail the coupon below and get a list of these bulletins. Then select the bulletins that will be of value to you. Mail your coupon right now. Do not put a stamp on the envelope. Your coupon will be "On His Majesty's Service."

SOME CLASS TO OUR HOCKEY BOY

The Belleville Ontario of February 4th, has the following to say about the hockey match in that city Wednesday evening of last week, between the Napanee and O.H.C. hockey teams:

The most evenly balanced game played here in many days was that in which Manager E. Chapman's B.C. team battled with the Napanee seven. The former had gathered fast team and it was fully expected that Belleville would turn out victor. But Napanee put into the field an excellent team for a town that has no O.H.A. connection. Such play as they put up last night must certainly stimulate hockey in the eastern metropolis. Napanee hockey play on an outdoor rink without advantages such as are available in Belleville, but despite the narrow field they have to draw from, they were a hard nut to crack. After an hour's battling every minute of the time, the match proved a tie nine to nine. Geo. Walters, of Napanee, refereed the game.

After the preliminary skirmish the face-off Napanee's heavy defence and left wing seemed to be harbingers of evil for the college team. Blessed with weight and the best wind, these men tore down the single or in combination and began scoring. Finkle, Belleville's best youth on defence, with White, r down the ice but he had a hard position in the heavy checking by visiting defenders, who could ride the locals out of their way by shoving weight. There was an audacity about some of the Napanee playing which was spectacular. The score looked three to one in Napanee's favour, but by two fortunate accidental shots the score was tied, but Napanee broke the tie scoring and ending the first period 4-3.

The second period in its opening saw an appreciable decline in Napanee's aggressiveness. They threw their defence more open than necessary and the locals bored in on the Many beautiful gifts testified to the popularity of the bride. The groom's gift to the witnesses were pearl lace pins and to the bride a wrist watch with monogram and check for $100.00. Who is the agent that teaches the boys to drink? Drinking men do not teach boys to drink. I have never yet found a drinking man who made a habit of teaching boys to drink. Who teaches them? You need not think the boot-logger is simply sustained by his peddling; he is sustained by the great national liquor trust. They must get those boys, and they go after them systematically. Why do they do it? What is their motive? Not to harm the boys. I am not fanatical on this question. They do it to get the profits from the sale of their goods. We propose to remove the motive; we propose to cut out the sale and everything that pertains to sale.

ONE CLASS TO OUR HOCKEY BOYS

The Belleville Ontario of February 1, has the following to say about a hockey match in that city on Tuesday evening of last week, between the Napanee and O.E.C. hockey teams:

The most evenly balanced game played here in many days was that which Manager E. Chapman's O.E.C. team battled with the Napanee team. The former had gathered a team and it was fully expected at Belleville would turn out victor. Napanee put into the field an excellent team for a town that has O.H.A. connection. Such playing they put up last night must certainly stimulate hockey in the east metropolis. Napanee hockeyists play on an outdoor rink without the advantages such as are available in Belleville, but despite the narrow ice they have to draw from, they did a hard nut to crack. After one hour's battling every minute of the ice, the match proved a tie nine all. J. Walters, of Napanee, refereed game.

After the preliminary skirmish in face-off Napanee's heavy defence left wing seemed to be harbinger of evil for the college team armed with weight and the best of speed, these men tore down the ice gleefully or in combination and began riving. Finkle, Belleville's heavy right on defence, with White, ran on the ice but he had a hard proposition in the heavy checking by the visiting defenders, who could ride the sticks out of their way by sheer might. There was an audacity about some of the Napanee playing which was spectacular. The score looked as if it was in Napanee's favour, but two fortunate accidental shots the tie was tied, but Napanee broke the tie scoring and ending the first period 4-3.

In the second period in its opening an appreciable decline in Napanee's aggressiveness. They threw their defence more open than necessary and the locals bored in on them

GRACE CHURCH NOTES.

The communion service in Grace Church last Sunday morning was very interesting, because of the large number who took part by way of testimony, and the large number of communicants. The interest was further enhanced by the large number uniting with the Church, 25 in all (including the five who united on the Wednesday evening previous). Of these 17 united on profession of faith and 8 by letter, making a total of over 70 since the first of July last. At the Quarterly Board meeting on Tuesday evening last, it was unanimously decided to hold a two weeks evangelistic campaign, commencing either the last week in February or the first week in March. The meetings will be in charge of the pastor, assisted by the officials and members of the church. Every member is expected to be present and assist. Next Sabbath the pastor will be on the Enterprise circuit preaching Missionary sermons, and the Rev. S. A. Kemp will preach morning and evening.

ome of the Napanee playing which as spectacular. The score looked three to one in Napanee's favour, but two fortunate accidental shots the score was tied, but Napanee broke the tie scoring and ending the first period 4-3.

The second period in its opening saw an appreciable decline in Napanee's aggressiveness. They threw their defence more open than necessary and the locals bored in on them in individual play with success. The O.B.S. ran up the score to 6-4 in the local favour. Then Napanee in a sudden spurt of energy cut their way through with two successful shots and tied the score.

The third period was the most sensational. Notch by notch each team attacked the other. O.B.C. worked very hard and Napanee rode at full speed up and down the ice. The latter visiting forwards were mixed in the melee and the young light layers of Belleville were ever on the ail, checking heavily. Belleville scored, then Napanee, then Belleville, then Napanee, then Napanee. With few minutes to play the puck got behind the trap net and White twisted a shot into goal which tied the me.
